BELGRADE—(U.P.)—The government of Premier Gen. Richard Dusan Simovitch will offer to sign a non-aggression pact with Germany in place of the tri-power past alliance signed by the Cvetkovich government, well-informed quarters reported today.

(By International News Service)

BELGRADE — War-ready Yugoslavia moved for closer ties with Turkey today as additional reinforcements were sent to this country's five borders and thousands of Germans and Italians fled by steamer, train and automobile.

At the same time, the Yugoslavian minister to Berlin returned suddenly to Belgrade, presumably for consultation. There were no immediate indications that severance of diplomatic relations was imminent.

(Editor's note: A DNB dispatch to Berlin said that a special train leaving Belgrade tonight would carry out the last German residents in Serbia.)

The delicate Turkish negotiations were entrusted to Milan Gavrilovic, Yugoslavian minister to Moscow who resigned his post when former Premier Dragisha Ovetkovic signed the Axis tripartite pact.

Gavrilovic immediately was offered a post as minister without portfolio in the new military regime of King Peter. On his departure from Moscow, he was ordered to proceed secretly to Ankara, where he arrived today.

Gavrilovic is expected to remain in the Turkish capital until Friday. Well-informed sources in Belgrade expressed belief he will attempt to convince Turkish officials that any German invasion of Greece would compromise Turk-

WAY UP TO 52

Mercury Climbs Steadily In Spite of Sun's Absence.

Despite overcast skies, the mercury climbed to a spring-like 52 degrees at noon today, only six degrees below the record high for the year.

From a low of 12 degrees Sunday morning, the temperature moved up 36 degrees to a high of 48 in the afternoon. The sunny skies and warm breezes brought out hundreds of motorists and pedestrians in the Mansfield area.

The weatherman said light rain tonight will be followed by slightly colder weather Tuesday. There was no threat, however, of a marked temperature drop.

A half inch of snow which fell Saturday disappeared under yesterday's warm sun.

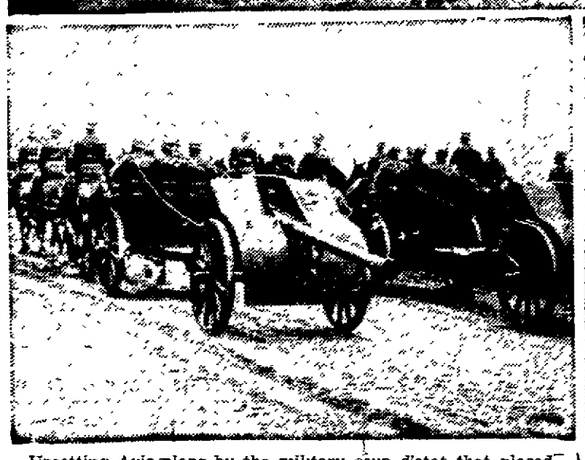
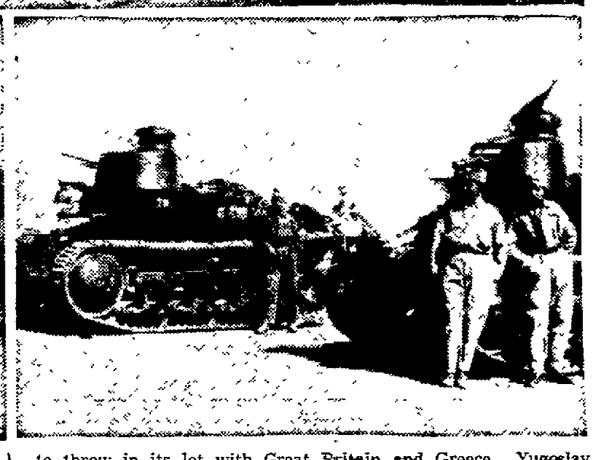
Yugoslavia's Army Takes Stand On Borders Facing Axis





Upsetting Axis plans by the military coup d'etat that placed young King Peter II at the head of the government, Yugoslavia now has placed its army to face the forces of Hitler and Mussolini which almost surround it. These pictures show typical units of the army of more than a million men that is prepared, perhaps, to throw in its lot with Great Britain and Greece. Yugoslav infantrymen are shown marching in review, top photo. Horse-drawn light artillery regiments, like the one shown at lower left, are among the forces in position along the frontier. Critical weakness in the Yugoslav army's composition is a shortage of tanks, pictured at lower right.

Springfield Youth Near Death In Hospital Here; Traffic Kills 12 In Ohio.

Automobile accidents injured two persons, one critically, in the Mansfield area over the week-end while at least 12 motorists died in Ohio traffic as ideal weather attracted thousands to the highways.

William A. Bell, 20, Springfield, was in a critical condition in General hospital today with a skull fracture after his car crashed through a guard rail on the Ashland hill and overturned.

State highway patrolmen said Bell apparently fell asleep and lost control of the car as he rounded a curve headed east on route 42 about 5 a. m. Sunday. The accident occurred a short distance east of the Madison high school.

Martin V. Denney, 23, also of Springfield, who was asleep in the car, escaped injury.

Struck by a car at Third and Diamond streets Saturday night, Bruce Weirich, 12, of 25 Bradford street, suffered minor head injuries. He was treated by a physician and taken home. The car was

Committee Meets Today To Study Rate Contract Bill

Russell D. Porch, chairman of council's utilities committee, announced today that he had called a committee meeting for 3 p. m. today in the city hill and will urge the committee to recommend for council passage the proposed five-year contract ordinance offered last week by the Ohio Public Service company to lower domestic electric rates in Mansfield.

Porch indicated that he would recommend to the committee that it ask council to give the ordinance, drawn up by City Solicitor M. D. Ward, jr., it first reading tomorrow night. The company had asked Porch and other city officials at a meeting Thursday to give the company some action on the ordinance soon as he wanted to organize a selling force by July 1, the date the lower rates would take effect.

Mansfield electric users stand to save $70,000 annually or $350,000 in the five year covered by the ordinance if passed by council.

Councilmen A. L. Croak and Fred Miller, the other members of the utilities committee, were non-committal today on the offer and said that they would make no statements until after the committee meeting. Both said they were not familiar enough with the proposed ordinance to express opinions on it.

1940 TAGS TAKE LAST RIDE TODAY

Motorists Stand In Line Today To Get Tags—They Have to Be on Cars Tomorrow.

Mansfielder's old blue and white 1940 automobile license plates were getting their last ride today.

With the deadline at midnight today for the use of 1940 plates, lines of purchasers stood before the windows of the Richland County Automobile club waiting their chance to buy the 1940 tags.

Anticipated sales of approximately 800 sets of plates during the day will bring the total sale for the month to approximately 10,225, according to club officials.

Police and highway patrol said there would be no extension of time for the purchase of tags and C. W. Wallace, state registrar of motor vehicles warned that enforcement officers throughout the state had been ordered to "pick up" motorists using 1940 licenses tomorrow.

Saturday's sale totaled 758 plates for the largest day of the sale. The year's total today is 8,806 plates as compared to last year's figure, 8,715 for the same time.

The club offices will be open until 8:30 p. m. today.

First Freighters of Year Reach Cleveland From Detroit.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Spring in Cleveland is official now.

The freighters Crescent City and South Park, hauling 600 automobiles from Detroit, plowed through heavy ice to dock here last night to open the 1941 navigation season.

Officials of the Nicholson-Universal Steamship Co., owners of the vessels, ordered them back to Detroit immediately without cargo and said regular boat-a-day arrivals could be expected with breaking of the ice.

FORECAST FDR WILL INTERVENE IN COAL CRISIS

OPM Officials Expect Action To Avert 'Strike' Should Coal Talks Fail.

ZERO HOUR APPROACHES

Fourth Strike Settled Today at Vanadium By National Mediation Board.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt will intervene to avert a "strike" of the nation's soft coal miners tonight, should other conciliation methods fail, it was forecast today.

OPM officials expect the president to move quickly if a deadlock in New York wage contract negotiations between the CIO's United Mine Workers union and soft coal operators is not broken by midnight, when the old contract expires. With only about 30 days supply of coal above the ground, a shutdown of the soft coal mines would shortly disrupt most national defense industries.

It was recalled that the president intervened two years ago to force a coal strike settlement after the mines had been shut down for about six weeks. In the present case, Mr. Roosevelt was expected to demand that miners remain at work while negotiations continue.

Mediation Board Settles Fourth Strike

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The new national mediation board today settled its fourth national defense strike when it won a "back to work" agreement in the CIO-Vanadium Steel Corp., dispute at Bridgeville, Pa.

The Vanadium plant, which had been strike bound since Feb. 10, makes alloys needed in armor plate production for the national defense program. The strike had involved 225 men.

CHECK ON DRUG

Authorities Find No Trace of Death-Dealing Tablets.

Members of the Mansfield police and department of health continued their check today on drug outlets in the city to make certain none of the shipment of sulfathiazole tablets believed responsible for several week-end deaths throughout the country was in the city.

Dr. W. B. Wild, assistant city-county health commissioner, warned doctors and druggists to check their stocks. He said that reports had been made of the presence here of any of the tablets in question.

New Jersey authorities spread the alarm Saturday after it was discovered that tablets made by a New Jersey firm were responsible for the deaths. The drug itself was not condemned but its action in combination with other medicines was found to be dangerous. The tablets are used for the treatment of pulmonary diseases.

U. S. Officials See Diplomatic Break Possible

Seizure of Ships For Sabotage Held Likely to Spread Throughout All Of Western Hemisphere; French Ship Makes Abrupt Move.

BULLETIN

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — (AP) — The German freighter Esinach and the Italian freighter Fella, anchored at Punta Arenas, were set afire by their crews this morning.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The lightning action of the United States in taking over more than 60 German, Italian and Danish merchantmen in American ports was expected today to develop into a hemisphere-wide move to thwart the departure or sabotage of long-idle Axis vessels.

A preliminary inspection showed that almost all of the Italian vessels taken over had been rendered useless by "wholesale sabotage," government authorities said.

That a violent Axis protest would be forthcoming was taken for granted in informed quarters, and the belief was that the dramatic events of the week-end had brought relations between the United States and the Axis powers close to an open rupture.

German and Italian authorities here maintained a stony silence, pending instructions from the foreign office, but the master of one Italian ship called the step "an act of war."

In all, some 300,000 tons of shipping were taken into protective federal custody by the coast guard in a rapid-fire series of operations from New England to the gulf coast and the Pacific northwest. There were two German ships, 28 Italian and more than 30 of Danish registry.

Twenty of the Italian ships, officials said, had been put "completely out of business" and Capt. Ranise Ernesto of the Italian freighter Mongibia taken over at Galveston, Texas, said he had received orders from the Italian naval attache at Washington to destroy the machinery of his ship. Informed of this statement, the naval attache refused to discuss the subject.

Officials here were of the opinion that there was good ground for the belief that other hemisphere nations would follow the example of the United States in taking over the Axis shipping which has used their harbors as sanctuaries since the start of the war.

Chile took the lead in mid-February by seizing three Danish cargo ships. Other American coun-

RESCUE 1,000 IN SEA BATTLE

British Pick Up Italians After Inflicting Heavy Defeat on Navy; Planes Used.

(By United Press)

LONDON — British warships after inflicting a shattering defeat on the Italian navy rescued nearly 1,000 Italian seamen before German dive bombing planes forced them to abandon their attempts to save between 200 and 300 more, the admiralty said today in a communique.

Before abandoning the rescue operations, the British commander in chief radioed the chief of the Italian naval staff at Rome giving him the position of the survivors and suggesting that a hospital ship be sent, the admiralty asserted.

"A reply was received and it is therefore possible that some of these men may be rescued," the communique said.

The communique told for the first time the story of the greatest British naval victory of the war, in which one of Italy's two 35,000 ton battleships was severely damaged, three Italian 10,000 ton cruisers and two destroyers were sunk, a third destroyer was probably sunk, a 5,069 ton cruiser was possibly sunk, damage was inflicted on other Italian ships and two German dive bomber planes were shot down.

It confirmed the astonishing news that in the engagement there was not a single British fleet casualty, except for the crew of two missing planes, and

CRASH PICKETS

Two Injured in Labor Disorder at Cleveland Plant.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Two persons were injured today as AFL unionists crashed through a CIO picket line at the E. F. Hauserman company, which is producing prefabricated steel houses to be erected near a naval powder station at Indian Head, Md.

The plant, closed last Thursday when the CIO furniture workers union charged six of its members had been discharged, has been operating under an AFL contract.

A company representative said operations had been resumed. The firm recently employed 140. AFL and CIO unions also clashed at the Cleveland Rock Wool company, where AFL pickets permitted only members of their organization to enter the plant. No one was injured there.

Civil Liberties Group Hits Refusal To Bargain With Men

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The senate civil liberties committee today blamed the bloody "little steel" strike of 1937 on the "uncompromising refusal" of the "independent" producers to bargain with workers.

The committee further declared that any company which today declines "under all circumstances" to enter into a signed bargaining contract is "endangering the national security."

Reporting on its protracted study of the stubbornly-fought strikes in the plants of the Bethlehem, Republic, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube companies almost four years ago, the committee told the senate they had a "peculiar relevance to the problems of industrial and national defense which challenged the nation today."

The committee held that the "little steel" strikes might easily have been avoided, and then stated:

"Certain it is that the nation cannot permit these companies today to take the same attitude they took in 1937 with the same inevitable consequences of interrupted production.

"Any company which today stands up and flatly refuses to enter into a signed bargaining contract under all circum-

Second Lecture In Vining Series Deals With Customer

"The Customer You Sell" will be the topic of Vernon E. (Sam) Vining's second in a series of sales course meetings Wednesday at 7:45 p. m. in John Simpson auditorium.

More than 600 sales persons and others interested in selling attending last week's session will be joined by many others who will take advantage of the individual tickets which will be sold at the box office for 75 cents each. Tickets were sold for the entire four meetings at $2.

Vining will continue the presentation of his unique sales training program, known as the "Mansfield plan," which if successful here will be tried throughout the country.

Charts, statistics, experts and other fixtures usually accompanying a sales course have been dropped. Vining, well known throughout the nation for his sales technique, believes that a development of the right mental approach will aid the salesman more than statistics.

The sales course is being sponsored by the Retail Merchants association. In addition to the sales lectures by Vining, those attending the course will take part in a sales contest during its last week. Prizes will be awarded to the best salesmen and the shoppers recommending them in letters to the association.

Must True Love Be Tested?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How long does it take to measure true love? Does love at first sight need to be tried and tested, surrounded by all types of prudent safeguards? Or shall we joyously accept the beautiful thing and take its future for granted?

When a lark sings we don't worry and argue—we simply listen in wonder. It's also true that we don't ask a rose to prove that it's a rose. But, you will remind me, love is one thing and marriage another. Marriage would be serious if it merely involved the whole of two lives. It also involves children, parents, friends—a whole human network. Yes, marriage is a condition in which two lovers, however ecstatically happy, however confident of their own hearts, must take time to think twice.

The other day I had a letter from a young pair, whose names are Jerry and Jane. They want to know what reasons there are, if any, for delaying their immediate marriage.

"We have known each other," they confide, "three weeks. We met at a house-party. After our first glance, it seemed as if we both knew. We just seemed to drift toward each other, excluding everyone around us. Inside of an hour we were promised lovers, and the whole problem of life was solved for both of us.

"Up to the time of our meeting neither of us had thought much about real love. So it came like a divine stroke of lightning.

"Fortunately, we don't have to wait because of money reasons. We both have jobs and can manage to live in a small apartment and have a little left. We adore each other so much that we don't think it necessary to spend any more days apart from each other than we have to. But our families say that we should wait till we are sure. What do you think?"

I believe that Jerry and Jane are not mistaken in their love. But I think theirs will be a more successful marriage if they first learn to know each other better, study each other's tastes and temperaments.

As a limit for this deliciously happy period of mutual questioning and discovery, I suggest four months. Nothing will be lost something surely will be gained, and the parents will be pacified.

But though I am certain this advice is wise, and though I earnestly beg Jerry and Jane to follow it, yet if these young lovers do surrender to their hearts' desire and elope next week, I must whisper that they will not thereby forfeit my blessing!

Remedy For Dry Scalp

By MME QUI VEVE

Bosses of beauty shops report that complaints about excessively oily hair are more frequent than vowls about dry tresses. The "oilies" cannot very well regard their stringy locks with indifference, especially as the finger wave wilts quickly and ringlets uncoil in a few days. Hair cares becomes a chore and, if locks are thinnish, the coiffure is a tough problem.

The "drys" have advantage in the fact that the hair appears more abundant than it is, and the permanent wave, properly achieved, is bound to be a success; it will stick around until the shafts grow out and the ends must be trimmed. From the standpoint of hair health, dryness is more likely to interfere with well being of the glory mop than an oily condition.

Hair lives on the blood supply in the scalp. It is kept lustrous by the lubricating fluid that is exuded by the sebaceous glands that are situated where the shafts rest in the flesh. If these glands are active, there can be no dryness. The proper treatment then for crisp tresses is rousing scalp message to incite the little oil gushers to awaken and do the work for which they were designed. Generous applications of oil are essential. Brushing the hair has a vitalizing effect.

Let us outline a treatment that will take no more than fifteen or twenty minutes.

The night before the shampoo begin with a brisk brushing. The brush should be narrow, bristles firm and grouped. A brush with bristles that buckle is worth nothing. Treat the hair strand by strand, holding each tress away from the head, using the brush so that the bristles touch the scalp. Do a rolling motion. Brisk grooming stimulates the network of blood vessels that is close to the surface of the flesh.

Part your glory crown at various places and, with a large medicine dropper, trickle hot mineral oil along the partings. Olive oil will do, but it is not as easily removed as mineral oil. Lubricate the ends of the hair that are extra dry.

Spread out fingers and thumbs, thumbs resting at the nape line; lift and rotate the flesh. In the normal state there is a soft underlying cushion of tissues; as the scalp tightens blood streams are restricted in their activities and the hair is not sufficiently nourished. Use the oil freely. Wrap a towel around the head.

In the morning shampoo with soap that has been melted several days before. For rinsing have the water fairly hot, use a strong current and a bath spray. Three, even four soapings may be necessary.

After the drying friction a little brilliantine into the scalp, so it will not be dry and scaly.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"I can't do that, Mary," I told my husband's niece, as dear to me as if she were mine. "I'm so tired that I can't keep my eyes open now. What I'll be after my train journey to New York, I do not even wish to think. But one thing I do know. I would disgrace your supper party. I am sure I should go to sleep right in the middle of it."

"Do you think I'd care?" she retorted. "We'll give you a chair with a high back and tuck a small pillow under your head. Then you can imagine you're in an automobile seat. That's where you're supposed to do your tallest and fanciest sleeping, isn't it?"

"I've been told so," I replied a bit absently, for scurrying through my brain was a query the answer to which eluded me.

Why was Mary relieved at my decision not to attend her supper party?

But intriguing though the speculation was, I had to put it aside summarily, for she was speaking again, this time with emphasis.

"Well! Whatever you decide about the party, one thing is certain, I'll see you beforehand and you'll tell me what's on your mind. Then you can slip away from us whenever you wish. And Noel will meet you at the train."

"Don't be foolish!" I told her with asperity. "I'll take a taxi from—"

"You'll do no such thing," she retorted, "unless you want to break Noel's heart. He'll be inside the ropes with his eyes glued on the train exit, so watch out for him, and don't you dare evade him. And now, darling, I must fly. I'll be seeing you at midnight. Goodbye!"

"Goodbye!" I said hastily as the receiver clicked, but I waited a long second before I turned back to Dicky. I did not want to trouble him with my odd reaction to what his winsome niece had told me.

But, whether it was instinct, intuition, or simple idle curiosity, I could not take Mary's hesitation to my announcement that I was coming to see her, or her insistence that Noel was going to meet me at the station, at their face value. The two other things were related in some way, I was sure, yet I could not determine the answer, and I did not wish Dicky to suspect my confusion. When at last, I turned back to him, however, I flattered myself that I betrayed no trace of what I was thinking.

"Mary okay?" he asked as I came out of the booth.

"Perfectly," I returned. "I am to see her as soon as I get back to the hotel—and I asked her to reserve a room for me there tonight."

"Good girl!" he commented, giving me a comradely pat on the shoulder. "That makes me feel a whole lot better. And now, if you'll yield that seat, I'll get in touch with Dad. You'd better stick close though, for it's a cinch—lead-pipe—that he'll want to talk to you as soon as he gets through with me."

"I know that," I said tenderly, for my father's affection for me is something I dearly cherish. "But ought we not to telephone Lillian first?"

"Not unless you are in a special hurry," he answered. "I think we ought to have all the news there is, before we talk to Lil. Not that I expect much so soon. Dad hasn't had a chance really to swing into action yet. But there's one thing certain. He's going to be tremendously interested in what I shall tell him about Carolyn's activities."

Seeks Help To Break Sassiness

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

"Dear Dr. Myers: We have received much help from your daily articles. I had several years' preparation and experience in kindergarten work and try to apply the methods in raising my own two daughters; one is past four, the other almost two.

"With the older girl, who is nervous, full of energy, very observing, comprehends quickly, co-operative, and very affectionate, we have successfully overcome a series of behavior problems such as tantrums, biting, hitting, the 'NO!' habit, and others. However, at present we want to know how to break her of 'talking back' — I mean plain 'sassiness.' She started last summer after hearing her only playmate do it with her mother. At first we ignored it, thinking she would stop if we didn't notice it. When it didn't stop we tried various punishments but none have been effective. She 'talks back' only to her Daddy and me, and to her Aunt who sometimes stays with her in the evenings (perhaps being her disciplinarians we have unintentionally commanded or nagged her too much.) To everyone else she is very polite.

"We try to make our home one of love and harmony and she has never heard us talk rudely, or raise our voices in anger or argument to one another. We try to divide our affections and attentions, especially between the two children, and they have never shown any signs of jealousy. I enclose a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it."

I can see how hard you have tried to be a good mother and I am sure you are a far better mother than you think you are. Already you have achieved much. Your kindergarten experience should be of great value to you.

Go on with the same poise you pursued in the kindergarten. Be sure never to talk back to this child. In your efforts to reason with her under great emotional strain you may find yourself practically quarrelling with her.

Carefully study the situations in which she is "sassy." As a result, you may be able to reduce the annoyances to her which arouse this. Once you are very clear about the matter and have disciplined yourself to keep calm and never argue with her, announce to her in gentle but decisive tones what the penalty will be for each offense. Perhaps this penalty should be to sit quietly in one place for exactly 20 minutes. Assign this punishment in a good kindergarten fashion, without anger or excitement. Always assign the same punishment immediately for the same sort of offense. Allow no doubts nor exceptions to occur.

Work out a plan with your husband whereby you follow the same procedure. If one of you deals with her misconduct let the other then be silent.

See that the baby lets this older child's things alone and respects her rights and possessions. Don't make older sister give up to younger, but praise her when she does. Be careful not to praise the younger for traits and achievements the older lacks. Never compare them unfavorably. Try to see that the relatives don't. In spite of what you say, jealousy is a big factor. It may be the biggest contribution to her behavior. Do show the older child more affection.

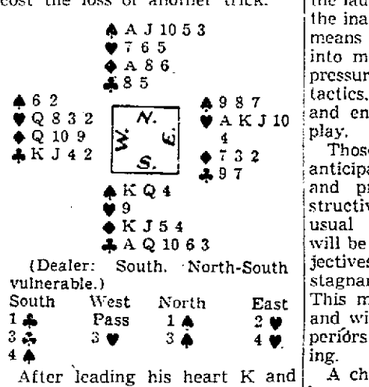
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE FIRST THING TO DO

After making whatever deductions you can from the opening lead and the opponents' bidding, your first job, after seeing the dummy laid down by your partner, is to count up your winners, in the case of a No Trump contract, or your losers, in the case of a suit contract. The number of apparent losing cards in your "master hand" may be small enough for you to have a sure thing way of making the contract. If so, don't try anything that jeopardizes it. If not, then and then only figure out ways and means to cut down the number of them which may possibly cost the loss of another trick.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♥
3 ♣	3 ♥	3 ♠	4 ♥

After leading his heart K and seeing the dummy's singleton, East switched to his spade 9 to prevent ruffs. The declarer promptly took this with the dummy's K, then led to his diamond A and ruffed one of his two losing hearts with the spade 4. Noting a dearth of entries now to his hand, he decided to accept philosophically the loss of another heart trick, since he still could make his contract if either minor suit finesse would work. So he led the spade Q to his A and promptly tried the club finesse, which lost to the K. West led his heart 3 to East's 10 and the latter returned the club 9. The declarer tried a finesse of the 10, which lost to the J, and he was down one.

How easy this contract was. North, who had lost one heart trick, could have treated both minor finesses as sure to fail and still make his contract by ruffing his two losing hearts. For this he needed two early entries to his hand. The first could have been by winning the second lead, the spade 9, in his own hand. He then could have ruffed one heart. The diamond A would have furnished entry for a ruff of the last heart. With his contract now safe, he could have tried for an overtrick by laying down the diamond K and another diamond, hoping for an even split of the suit. When that developed, he could have won any return, dropped trumps and used the club A as an entry to play the thirteenth diamond for a club discard, thus making an overtrick.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, April 1.

A particularly lively and productive day is forecast from the prevailing lunar and mutual aspects. There may be a greatly accelerated state of affairs especially in the launching of new projects or in the inauguration of fresh ways and means for spurring static affairs into motion, possibly under great pressure and thoroughly practical tactics, in which skill, initiative and energy are brought into full play.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of much activity and progress along really constructive and practical lines. Unusual enterprise and initiative will be brought to bear on new objectives as well as to stimulate stagnant or frustrated efforts. This may be under high pressure and with direct action, elders, superiors and those in power assisting.

A child born on this day should be energetic, practical, skillful and masterful although having a friendly, gracious and generous nature.

She Loved a Spy + + + + + +

By Sylvia Taylor

(Copyright, 1941)

CHAPTER XIII

She had no idea how long it was before Karl returned. He was alone.

"Let us understand each other," he said, sitting down at his desk. "It would be most unfortunate if I were to become involved with the police. I am not an American citizen."

"You are a German?" Joan asked dully.

"Naturally, as is everyone else associated with me here at the club."

"Paul, too?"

"Of course, Paul, too." Karl Miller smiled as he leaned towards her. "You see we are engaged in certain activities which are necessarily very private."

Then at last Joan knew the truth. This was a spy ring. It must be. That explained everything—those mysterious letters to Mexico, Karl's reticence. The Club Elite was only a blind. But why was Karl telling her this?

"I trust you now," Karl said with a wry smile. "You are in much too deep to get out. Not only would you be held for murder, but you are implicated just as much as the rest of us. You recall the portfolio you delivered to the freighter?"

She stared at him without answering.

"That envelope contained very valuable information. Information enough to convict you on many counts. You were seen delivering that envelope by several people. One of them happened to be Paul Sherman."

Little by little Joan Leland's confused brain began to see the picture. And she knew that what Karl said was true. She was in too deep to get out. But she must get out! She could not, would not continue to have anything to do with Karl Miller now that she knew the truth. A spy! So this was the mystery that she had once considered romantic and attractive! She looked at him now with loathing.

But Karl put a hand over hers. "Be sensible, Joan you're hysterical at the moment but you'll be all right. You have nothing to worry about. I'm very fond of you. Is there any reason we should not go on . . ."

The girl leaped to her feet. "I hate you, Karl Miller! And no matter what you say, I'm not afraid of you!"

His hands were on her shoulders. "You don't mean that, liebchen!

He seemed amused at her outburst. Once she had cherished that tender look. Now it was loathsome to her. With the madness of despair, she struck him full in the mouth.

Karl stepped back and his face was white with rage. "You little fool! Do you think it's as easy as that? Don't you know you'll be followed from the moment you leave this office? You will be driven to work every day by Paul Sherman. If you make a false move you will meet with—an unfortunate accident. Shall we call it that?"

Silence. "There must be some way," Joan thought, "but what?" She would tell Sybil! Sybil would know what to do. Until then it would be best to pretend to Karl that he had won. He must believe that she was frightened.

"It seems that all the cards are in your hands," she admitted.

"Very clever of you to realize it."

Joan wondered if she could really deceive Karl. Even if she were followed home, he would have no way of knowing what she told Sybil. She could tell Sybil to go to the police—yet Karl might have them both followed. Joan could not believe that Karl would take any chances.

"I'm going home," she said wearily, "straight home. You needn't worry about my going to the police tonight."

"I am not in the least worried," Karl said calmly. "You are young and beautiful, and I am sure that you are not yet ready to die."

She looked at him and for a moment she longed to see that other Karl . . . the Karl she had loved. Tears stung in her eyes. How could she have been so blind? A reckless, adventure-loving girl, laughing at Fate, moving blithely towards her own destruction. She had held open, eager arms to life, welcomed anything that was "exciting and different." But Sybil had been the wise one."

"You can't trust any man," Joan thought bitterly. Even Paul Sherman, who had warned her about Karl, was involved in the spy ring. He had warned her about Karl but he was no better.

"You didn't have to go so far, did you, Karl?" Joan asked now. "You didn't have to pretend to love me, did you? Wasn't that unnecessary?"

"You are very charming," Karl said, bowing.

"And you are very clever, but if you hadn't asked me to marry you . . ."

"That proved my sincerity?"

"Yes. Although I'm ashamed to admit it."

"Perhaps it would interest you to know that I already have a wife . . ." then he added smoothly, "in my own country."

This was the final blow. Karl's announcement that he had a wife in Germany came as a complete shock to Joan Leland. She had attached so much importance to his desire to marry her that it had never occurred to her he should be insincere. Even when she realized that he was involved in the spy ring and had tried to pin the murder of Eric Strom upon her, she still clung to his proposal as the one honest fact in their previous relationship. Now this too was gone.

"If you are ready to go home," Karl suggested, "I will drive you."

"Very well," Joan answered expressionlessly.

Together they left the office, walked by the gay throng that celebrated in the Club Elite, celebrated with no suspicion of the tragedy that had been enacted in the back office. People were laughing, drinking, dancing, all in a holiday mood. Joan stared at them with new and disillusioned eyes. Karl was a spy. Karl had a wife in Germany. Karl had threatened to accuse her of Eric's murder. If she went to the police, she would meet the same fate. Even Paul had refused to help her.

"There must be some way," Joan thought desperately as she sat silently by Karl Miller's side. She could telephone the police from her apartment. Karl would have no way of knowing about that—until it was too late. Sybil could go to the authorities. Surely there was no way that Karl could follow both girls day and night, trace every phone call. Comforted by the thought of Sybil's wise advice, Joan felt more confidence in the situation.

She told herself that she hated Karl Miller as he helped her out of his car. Her heart was completely dead but underneath the shock of emotional reaction was a deadly wound. It is not easy for any girl to forget love in a moment. Love does not turn into loathing without agony. She was filled with humiliation that she had given her first love, in all its tenderness, to a man who had made a joke of it. A man who had asked her to marry him only to deceive her.

"I will see you tomorrow as usual," Karl was saying. "Paul will drive you to work after this. You understand?"

"I understand perfectly."

For a moment they stared at each other. Sweethearts an hour ago. Now enemies forever. Swiftly Joan turned and ran up the steps.

In the living room she was greeted with darkness and silence. She switched on one small lamp and called, "Sybil, where are you?"

But only her own voice sounded in the high-ceilinged rooms.

Strange that Sybil should not be home yet. Apparently she had not returned from work. Joan ran into the bedroom. It was undisturbed. In the kitchen there were no signs that Sybil had eaten her dinner. And then on the kitchen table Joan saw an envelope. Tearing it open, she found a note in Sybil's handwriting. "It'll be back soon. Something terrible has happened. . . ."

A cold chill of premonition swept Joan. Instantly her mind leaped to Karl Miller. Had he suspected her plan of enlisting Sybil's aid? But how could he? And why would Sybil say, "I'll be back soon?" Surely it could not be so "terrible."

"I'm just nervous," Joan told herself.

She tried to light the fire but it refused to burn and smouldered out, leaving the room in dismal silence. Clasping her hands, Joan walked around the room. "I've got to talk to someone," she thought hysterically. "I can't stand this any longer."

But as she drew back the window curtain she saw Karl Miller's car still in front of the apartment. If she left, he would surely follow her. The telephone! She ran across the room and seized it from its place on the table. With a trembling finger she dialed the operator. The silence of a completely dead wire was too obvious to be mistaken. Her telephone was disconnected. Karl, it seemed, had thought of everything.

She was seized then by absolute panic. She must get out of here—but how?

There was a fire escape on the side of the building that opened off the kitchen.

"Karl couldn't see me there," Joan said aloud, and the sound of her own voice frightened her.

It was then that she heard something, like the creaking of a board. It seemed to come from the kitchen. Joan stood still. She was afraid to move.

Her hand felt for the switch and the living room was flooded with light.

"That's better," she thought, and went into the bedroom to put on her hat and coat. Against the windowpane slow rain had begun to fall. Joan looked out a front window again. Karl was still there! The fire escape was her only chance. The apartment was on the second floor and there was a good drop to the ground, but a small garden made it safe to jump.

"I can make it," Joan said. "I must!"

She reached the kitchen where Sybil's note still lay upon the table. The shade was drawn over the kitchen window. Joan advanced towards it and stretched out her hand when another sound came from without—the unmistakable sound of footsteps upon the iron staircase.

FDR Stops to Inspect Two Army Camps

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself:

I DON'T mind sitting on the side aisles in a movie theater except when the picture stars one of three cinema personalities: Jimmy Stewart, Gary Cooper or Katharine Hepburn.

Kilgallen.

This trio is so thin, long, narrow and admirably curveless, even when seen straight on through the admittedly fattening eye of the camera, I can't bear to see them elongated by an oblique view of the screen. With Joan Blondell, Lana Turner and Clark Gable it's different. They've got more meat on their bones. . . . . .

I dislike people who measure the amount of fun they've had by the amount of money they spent. Some of the best things in life come without a cover charge. . . .

If I could find a night club, boite or bistro where the words "drafted," invasion" and "blockade" were never mentioned, I would make it my uptown office.

I guess this is my season to be puzzled by our First Ladies of the Theater. Earlier in the year I was baffled by Helen Hayes' wish to play what amounts to a small ingenue role in "Twelfth Night," one of the cheesier dramas of the Bard: now I am similarly confused at Katharine Cornell's choice of the meagre role of Jennifer in Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma," an out-dated piece which (like most Shaw) reads better than it plays and which, standing on its own beside such contemporary pieces as "There Shall Be No Night" and "The Corn Is Green," is scarcely worth the trouble of crawling through the crosstown traffic.

Well, at any rate, it is a compliment to the modesty of both Miss Hayes and Miss Cornell that they chose these vehicles when they could have played in anything they wanted.

Nobody could say the girls picked out flashy parts for themselves.

Most charming gentleman over 40 I can think of is Edward Johnson, of the Metropolitan. One of the handsomest, too. . . . When I hear the first notes of the Rhapsody in Blue, I see skyscrapers rising against the city sky at night. Gershwin wrote music that sounds the way Manhattan looks.

Funny how many readers guess the identities of characters in the "You Can't Print That" column, even when I've deliberately changed facts to make them less identifiable. I get scores of letters and postcards from smarties saying, "Aha, I knew you meant So-and-so!"

Optimistic note: Debutantes seem to have given up the habit of combing their hair over luncheon tables.

It would be interesting, I think, to meet a South American who wasn't a millionaire. . . . Some words are very silly when you think of them. Nutmeg, for instance.

A lot of the credit for the gay success of Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe shows ought to go to Raoul Pene Du Boise, whose costuming jobs are so brilliant and exciting.

Sometimes I get a perfectly Lucius Beebe yen to ride on a choo-choo train, but usually it takes the sight of a freighter putting out to sea on a blue-sky day to give me real wanderlust.

Mark Warnow is a lad who knows what to do with an orchestra. . . . I never chew gum in public because I know I am a violent gum-chewer, along the lines of the gum-snapping stenographer so often portrayed in the cinema. It's a sight to frighten people.

I can never imagine myself dancing in the aisles with the jitterbugs at the Paramount, but if anyone could inspire me to do it, it would be those rhythm-daffy Andrews Sisters, who want their mama to scrub them, their daddy to heat them and their brother to bounce them.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

You don't have to take anybody's word that this a good picture. All you have to do is listen to a few of the arguments which end with (a) "I say he shoulda jumped," or (b) "I say he shoulda done just what he did." Any picture that starts such a fuss about the hero's ultimate fate has to have a lot to offer before the disputed climax arrives, and "Meet John Doe" has plenty.

Capra, with his knack for making a sermon more entertaining than a ten-twent-thirt' meller, is preaching brotherly love. When a powerful financier takes over a newspaper and chops off heads, the girl columnist (Stanwyck) angrily fakes a letter from one "Joe Doe" declaring that he will jump from the city hall tower on Christmas Eve as a protest against the evils of modern life. The hoax blossoms, forces the paper to produce John Doe in the flesh, and Long John Willoby, a hobo, is drafted.

With speeches written by the girl proclaiming "Love Thy Neighbor," the John Doe movement sweeps the country. When Long John discovers that the good-will clubs are being used to promote Boss Arnold's Fascistic designs on the country, he tries to expose the fake is instead discredited. Then he feels that to restore faith in his followers he must carry out the promised suicide. The girl's frantic plea—that the greatest of all John Does centuries ago had made the sacrifice unnecessary—wins him back.

It is a fantastic fable, kept so consistently close to the realities of the modern American scene as to be credible. As usual, Capra gets excellent performances from his players, gives them pungent dialogue. Samples: Toomey's scene explaining to John Doe what his message has meant; Gleason's bar-room dissertation on what the Star-Spangled Banner does to him; Stanwyck's climactic plea to John Doe; Brennan's discourse on "heelots"—something rare.

"The Penalty." Edward Arnold, Lionel Barrymore, Marsha Hunt, Robert Sterling, Gene Reynolds, Veda Ann Borg.

Bandit Arnold's son, reared to the profession, finds regeneration amid the simple joys of country life. Some clever twists and good performances, notably one by a trained goose, make it a good cops-and-robbers thriller with tear-jerking extra.

Fast-moving in the city sequences, it bogs down somewhat when it goes bucolic, but picks up again for the son's final character test.

Chatter Corner

FOOD'S GOOD

That's Report of Ohio Department of Agriculture After Study.

That's the report of the state agriculture department's division of foods and dairies in its report on 46,623 inspections and analysis of 590 samples.

'LITTLE STEEL,' SWOC REACH A FINAL ACCORD

All Complaints Growing Out of 1937 Strike Settled at Youngstown.

YOUNGSTOWN —(U.P.)— Final disposition of all complaints against the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., by the Steel Workers Oranizing Committee (CIO) growing out of the 1937 "little steel" strike were provided for today in an agreement effected between the company and the union and approved by representatives of the National Labor Relations Board.

The settlement ends three years of litigation which followed the strike.

The agreement calls for reinstatement of 266 employes and for the company to turn over to the NLRB $170,000 to be used in payment of back wage claims. Eight of the employes to be reinstated in their old jobs or comparable positions were employed in the Chicago district and the others in the Youngstown area.

All but 122 of the men to be reinstated, are at work now, but seven have less desirable jobs than they formerly held. They will be restored to their former employment rating.

Of the back wage payments, $150,000 will be paid to the 266 employes and $20,000 will be divided among nine men who are not to be restored to their jobs.

The settlement also provides for the dissolution of company unions and for company to refrain from interfering with workers organization efforts.

The agreement was signed for the company by J. C. Argetsinger, vice president and general counsel, and for the union by Lee Pressman, general counsel, John L. Mayo, sub-regional director, and Joseph German, district SWOC director. Two NLRB attorneys signed for the board, and final board approval was expected within a few days.

DEFENSE ORDERS AT 11 BILLIONS

Army, Navy, Let Contracts To Ohio Firms Totaling 420 Millions.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Army and navy defense contract awards up to March 8 totaled $11,884,000,000, the office of production management announced today. The total authorizations by congress to that date were $16,364,000,000.

The army, with an authorized program of $7,098,000,000 on that date, had awarded contracts totaling $5,900,500,000. Navy awards totaled $5,983,500,000 out of $9,266,000,000. The OPM explained navy spending lagged because its authorizations covered completion of ships in 1942 and later.

Ohio firms, which received $420,533,007 worth of defense contracts up to mid-March, have been awarded an additional $578,848 worth from the army and navy.

Although awards for the last two weeks have not been tabulated, contracts totaling $19,863,810 were let to Buckeye industries between March 1-15.

Delivery dates were not reported.

ROOSEVELT JACKSON DAY TALK GETS BOTH PRAISE AND BLAME

WASHINGTON — (AP) — President Roosevelt's Jackson day address was alternately praised today as a "magnificent" plea for national unity and deplored as a new step toward war.

White House supporters were laudatory in their comments, while senate opponents of the administration's foreign policy characterized the speech as bellicose.

Mr. Roosevelt, broadcasting from the presidential yacht Potomac at Port Everglades, Florida, told Jackson day dinners throughout the country Saturday night that the times call "for courage and more courage — action and more action."

Citing Wendell L. Willkie's support of the country's foreign policy as an example of patriotism, Mr. Roosevelt declared that "the enemies of democracy are now trying to destroy our national unity."

He reaffirmed the nation's intention to aid "those who help block the dictators."

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.), a leading opponent of the British aid program, said he was "amazed" that the president used the word "dupes" for those "who oppose going into the war."

Wheeler declared that the "dupes" in America were those who are "being deceived by propaganda as we were in the last war."

Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the senate foreign relations committee said he regarded Mr. Roosevelt's address as a plea "for national unity and a non-partisan attitude."

BILL UP TODAY

House Votes on 'Immunity' For Newspapermen.

Scheduled to reconvene tonight to start the 13th week of the regular session of the state legislature, the house of representatives is expeced to vote on the "immunity" measure which would protect newspapermen against disclosure of their news sources.

The bill will be submitted for a vote after study by the house judicial committee of which Representative John L. Catlett of Richland county is a member. Catlett voted to report the bill out of committee favorably.

Laff-a-Day

"I wish I knew. Every time I've asked him their names or telephone numbers he says they're military secrets!"

When Don Cram went to Sandusky Sunday afternoon for a pleasure ride he had no idea how much woe he was in for. His car refused to start after he parked it in Sandusky, and he guessed he was out of gas. By the time he found a gasoline station, however, he was so far away from the car that he had to get a taxi to take him back. With the new gas supply, the car still wouldn't go. A sympathetic motorist pushed the car to a garage where Cram found the fuel line was clogged. By that time the afternoon was nearly gone and it didn't make much difference anyway.

Cab drivers at one of the Walnut street cab stations enjoyed their own amateur radio program Saturday. One of the more talented members climbed into the dispatcher's chair and serenaded them with guitar and hillbilly songs through the microphone usually used for dispatching cars for calls.

The programs Mansfielders received at the $25-a-plate Jackson Day dinner in Columbus Saturday night were right in keeping with the cost of the meal. With shiny, bright red covers decorated in blue ink, the programs had four pages with edges tipped with blue. They were tied with red, white and blue cord. The major course at the dinner included "breast of chicken Jackson on toast," but the guests weren't sure how it differed from other chicken. Attending the dinner from Richland county were Author Louis Bromfield, who was toastmaster; George Hawkins, Postmaster Herman Homberger, E. B. Kallmerten, and Mr. and Mrs. John Correll.

R. B. "Mud" Gardner sent a parking violation ticket to the police department today with a dollar and an amusing note. In the note, Gardner told Helen Baughman, department clerk, that the ticket was issued to his wife for overtime parking. He enclosed the dollar, he wrote "in lieu of her lack of girlish charm." It seems Mrs. Gardner had attempted to convince an officer that she shouldn't get the ticket, but hadn't succeeded.

STILL AT LARGE

Cleveland Bandits Who Got $20,000 Elude Police.

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Police today were running down clues to a $20,000 robbery late Saturday when five armed thugs ambushed and slugged two armed guards of the Brinks Express company in a fourth floor corridor of a downtown building.

In Cleveland's most daring daylight robbery in more than a year, the five thugs were waiting just beyond a doorway through which the guards, Leo Auker and Elmer W. Caddick had to pass.

The guards never had a chance to draw their revolvers. They were struck on the heads with gun butts and disarmed. So carefully was the robbery planned that police did not know how the gunmen made their escape.

PRESIDENT HEADS BACK FOR CAPITAL

Has No Comment on Plan To Seize Ships as He Looks Over Training Sites.

(By International News Service)

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON — Having released a flood of sorely needed war implements to Great Britain and Greece, President Roosevelt turned his attention today to an inspection of two southern army cantonments where the government is training 66,000 men for possible defense of the United States against the dictator alliance.

There was "no comment" from the presidential special train on reports that Washington was authorizing seizure of all Italian, Danish and some German merchant craft in American harbors. It was apparent, however, that only Mr. Roosevelt could order such unprecedented peacetime action.

The president, heading back to Washington from a Florida fishing vacation, stopped this morning at Fort Jackson, close by Columbia, S. C., and planned to stop also at Fort Bragg, near Fayetteville, N. C., to see for himself how America's young men are progressing in their military training.

At Camp Jackson, one of the army's new mechanized divisions of 12,000 regulars was ordered out for their commander-in-chief's inspection this morning. This division is modeled after the Nazi Panzer units which the Germans have used so effectively in their conquest of the European continent.

When the president detrained at Fort Jackson for an inspection which lasted an hour, he was greeted by Gov. Burnet Maybank and Maj. Gen. William E. Shedd, commander of the first army corps.

Late in the afternoon, another stop will be made at Fort Bragg where more than 30,000 troopers are being trained in coast and field artillery.

Accompanying the president on this survey of a small portion of the nation's manpower was Harry Hopkins, who will be the ace man in administering the $7,000,000,000 lend-lease act.

Blame Increase In Traffic Toll On Defense Work

CHICAGO — (AP) — Nearly half the increase in America's traffic toll this year has been caused by national defense activities, the National Safety Council reported today.

A 24-state survey by the council indicated that at least 320 of the 740 additional traffic deaths in January and February, compared to the same months in 1940, were due to increased military personnel and vehicles, and the congested traffic of expanding defense industries.

Traffic deaths rose 11 per cent in January and 22 per cent in February over the 1940 toll.

A specific instance cited by the council was the Ravenna ordnance area, Ohio, where the four counties had a death toll of nine during the first two months of 1940 and 25 in the like period of 1941. By comparison the death rate for the entire state rose only 10 per cent.

Confusion Reigns In Southland

Strange Names Appear In Major Box Scores.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

ALL is confusion in the Grapefruit League, as no doubt the baseball people wish it, and you still can't tell the names, number and salaries of players from a box score.

But anybody who can skim through McGuffey's third reader is welcome to try reading between the lines.

The New York Yankees mean business and have shown it by taking over the lead in the Citrus circuit. They have won 15 of 20 games. Rookie Phil Rizzuto has hit safely in 14 consecutive games and been deferred by his local draft board. The rest of the American League might as well start cringing.

The opening of the major league season still is two weeks away, but the Philadelphia Athletics are in a slump. After winning 13 of their first 16 exhibitions, they lost four of five last week.

The St. Louis Cardinals, who had their team all set on paper during the winter, are shuffling their cards like a magician. Don Padgett, who was going to return to the outfield, again is a catcher. There's a new infield combination every other day. Leftfield was to be the exclusive property of Rookie Harry Walker, but Ernie Koy now is there most often.

The Cincinnati Reds have done better than any other National League club, winning 12 and losing 7, but Catcher Ernie Lombardi still hobbles on that injured ankle and Pitcher Paul Derringer is home nursing a pain in his groin from being hit by a batted ball.

Ramsey then teamed with Green in the doubles but lost to Harry Sage of Columbus and Sam Shannon of Cleveland, 18-21, 21-18, 21-18, only three games being played by agreement.

The women's title went to Miss Leah Thall of Columbus, the defending champion.

ROOK SHOWS PROMISE

GOVERNOR STASSEN

He didn't gain a place among the leaders nor did he roll a high series, but Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, above, still remains the hero of the American Bowling Congress tourney at St. Paul. Stassen, rolling with a St. Paul team, turned in a 208 game in his series, which included a poor 101 start. It was the highest score made by a governor in the 41-year history of the A. B. C.

Lombardi Gets Back In Action

Big Ernie Helps Reds Defeat Boston Sox.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. —(U.P.)— The Cincinnati Reds meet the Philadelphia Phillies here today before they open their 10-game series with the Boston Red Sox tomorrow at Dothan, Ala.

The world champions were looking more like themselves today with Ernie Lombardi apparently back in harness. The Red receiver made his first appearance of the season yesterday as the Reds edged the Boston Red Sox, 2 to 1.

The ankle injury Lombardi received in the world series last fall seemed to give him little trouble as he worked the first six innings. In his two appearances at the plate the catcher beat out a hit to deep short and fouled out.

Bucky Walters hurled the first six frames for the Reds and hooked up in a neat pitching duel with Joe Dobson. The American leaguers got their lone run in the fifth when Frankie Pytlak doubled home Jim Tabor.

* * *

The Reds won the game in the sixth on singles by Bill Werber, Frank McCormick and Lonnie Frey, a sacrifice by Mike McCormick and Harry Craft's long fly.

Jim Turner blanked the Sox during the final three innings. The Reds made seven hits off Dobson and Herb Hash while the Red Sox were held to five.

Indians Battle Giants

Start Homeward Trek With Old Rivals.

VALDOSTA, Ga. — (AP) — The Cleveland Indians today joined their not-so-friendly rivals, the New York Giants, for the annual barnstorming trip northward.

Al Milnar was nominated to pitch, with Mel Harder and Al Smith due to draw assignments early in the week.

The two teams clash daily until the week-end when the Indians take on Knoxville of the Southern association twice. The series will be resumed April 7, closing in New York City April 13.

The clubs travel on the same train, but in different cars and little fraternizing is expected. The rivalry has grown intense since the barnstorming began in 1934.

Bob Feller flashed mid-season form yesterday in Atlanta as he fanned 10 batters in the Indians' 7 to 2 victory over the hometown club. The Tribe ace gave up only four hits in seven innings, Atlanta getting two hits and two runs off Bill Zuber in the 9th inning.

The Redskins meanwhile blasted the offerings of two Atlanta pitchers for 13 hits, including a 400-foot home run by Jeff Jeath. Rollie Hemsley had a double and a single and Ray Mack two singles.

* * *

Zuber, fighting to hold a job on the enlarged pitching staff, breezed through the eighth inning, but walked two men in the ninth and this coupled with the two hits deprived Cleveland of a shutout.

Three-Second Rule Modified

More Offense Liberty Given Bucketballers.

KANSAS CITY, Mo —(U.P.)— Modification of the three-second rule to give more liberty on offense will be the principal change in basketball regulations next year, the national basketball rules committee of the United States and Canada decided today.

The committee, in a 14½ hour session, considered many changes, but made only a few, and they were minor.

H. V. Porter of Chicago, secretary, said coaches throughout the country were agreed on the need for standardization of equipment.

The committee went on record as favoring replacement of the old, rectangular backboards with fan-shaped boards, and standardization of the molded type basketball.

The three second rule was changed to permit an offensive player with the ball to operate without restriction in the outer half of the free throw circle, behind the free throw line.

However, if a man possesses the ball for longer than three seconds in the area from the free throw line to the end line, the ball still is to be awarded to the opponent out of bounds.

Other principal changes provide for substituting of players at any time the ball is dead, including the time after a field goal is scored, and surrender of the ball immediately to the nearest official by any player guilty of a rules infraction.

Previously, the offending player was required to surrender the ball only in case of a double dribble.

Buck Gridders Start Real Work

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Preliminaries over, Paul Brown gets down to serious business tomorrow in the making of his first football team on the big time.

He'll send his Ohio State University hopefuls out for spring training and there'll be hard work for all until May 10 when the Buckeye fans get their first peek at Brown's product in the annual intrasquad game.

* * *

Some of those who follow the fortunes of the Bucks have an idea that the former Massillon mentor may fashion his backfield chiefly from last season's freshman material, and Paul Serringhaus, Hamilton's triple-threat back, was mentioned as a standard-bearer for the youngsters. Tom Kinkaide is the only regular backfield man available, although there will be several substitutes on deck.

Judge Mac Considers Bulla Case

Johnny Refuses To Go Around With Guldahl.

By HENRY McLEMORE

AUGUSTA, Ga.—(U.P.)—Hand me down my wig and robe, son, I am going to sit in judgment on Johnny Bulla and Ralph Guldahl.

* * *

They're a-feuding, you know. It started in Asheville when Bulla quit the Land of the Sky open golf tournament rather than finish a round with Guldahl. "Too slow," said Bulla. "Much too slow. I'd rather never win a tournament than play with Guldahl."

Let us consider the case.

Guldahl is slow, there can be no doubt of that. He wiggles, he waggles, he squirms and he jiggles before making a shot off the tee. He is deliberate to the point of exasperation on the fairway, and when he reaches the green he studies a putt as if it were a strange animal, washed up on the shore from some mythical land.

I have heard it said that a jar of molasses—given a pair of knickers and set of clubs—could beat Ralph around a course, even in freezing weather. I have also heard it said that one of the reasons he has to study a putt so long is that the grass grows and changes in length between the time he addresses the ball and finally taps it toward the hole.

But don't let us overlook this fact, Guldahl's name is written twice on the United States National Open cup. That is the blue ribbon of golf, the open, and to win it just once is the goal of every man who swings a club for pay.

Bulla's name is not on that cup. One must wonder if Bulla would adopt a more leisurely pace around the course if he knew deliberation on every shot would write it on the big silver mug.

But a judge must study both sides of the argument, and Bulla has one, whether he has won a National Open or not. Guldahl—and I am sure he does not do it with malice aforethought—is unfair to many of his fellow professionals when he plays so slowly. The average professional golfer is much faster than Guldahl. He makes his shot and moves along. Too, the average professional is a high strung creature.

More often than not he is making every shot in the hope of paying the rents, buying baby a new bib, and the missus a new frock. To be paired with Guldahl really does something to their nerves. It hurts their game and what hurts their game hurts their livelihood. Bulla is not the first to object to Guldahl's slowness. He is the first to make an open break with Ralph, but this reporter has heard a score of pros grumble about being paired with him.

My summation: Bulla was tactless and rude in making his break with Guldahl so obvious.

Guldahl could be more considerate. He could play a bit faster without hurting his game. In my opinion a man who knows enough about golf to hit the ball as well as Ralph does, gains nothing from a five-minute study of every lie, every roll. He could reduce this study by two minutes and be just as efficient.

Here boy, take my robe and wig. I'm finished, and next time bring me a wig that doesn't have a cowlick.

ENGINEER GRADS IN DEMAND NOW

12,500 Engineers to Graduate In June Held Inadequate By College Dean.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—(U.P.)—Engineering schools in American colleges and universities will graduate this June fewer than one-third of the number of engineers required to play important roles in ever-expanding defense industries, according to an estimate by Dr. H. U. Hammond, dean of the School of Engineering at Pennsylvania State College.

Emphasizing that the expected 12,500 or slightly more engineers to receive June diplomas will be woefully inadequate to fill industry's needs, Dr. Hammond concluded the situation is so critical that "the most patriotic course which a student of engineering can adopt is to complete his education without interruption and as quickly as possible."

The Penn State engineering dean praised the government proposal for speeding up the education of engineering students by eliminating summer vacation. He added, however, the measures must be taken to increase the number of students being trained.

"The engineer's place is so important in the whole picture of defense production, and so vital to its speed and efficiency, that every practical means should be taken to insure a growing supply of trained engineers," he said.

Dean Hammond pointed out that students who drop out in the middle of their engineering courses to accept jobs, even though they be in defense industries, cannot be nearly so valuable to national defense as those who carry their studies to completion.

Almost all industries have greatly increased the quota of engineering graduates they are hiring this year, he said.

New Secrets of Uranium Have Been Discovered

BERKKELEY, Cal.—(INS)—New secrets of Uranium 235, the heavy element which science believes holds the key of atomic power, have been learned at the University of California.

University scientists reported that they have succeeded in splitting an atom of Uranium 235 into equal parts, by "shelling" it with high speed atomic bullets. In previous attempts, the splitting was accomplished but the two parts were uneven.

The uranium atom is unique in that it splits when its nucleus is shattered. The splitting produces energies of 100 million volts and more. However, there are reasons why this vast amount of power has not yet been controlled and harnessed. One of the major reasons is that Uranium 235 is exceedingly difficult to isolate.

Using the university's 225-ton cyclotron, Drs. Emilio Segre and Glenn Seaborg performed the experiments with very fast neutrons of 16 million electron volts as "bullets." Earlier research utilized neutrons of five million electron volts or less.

MILD RALLYING TINGE SHOWN ON MART TODAY

Better Labor Outlook Props Speculative Sentiment on New York Exchange.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—A mild rallying tinge was exhibited by today's stock market.

Early improvement was registered for U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, N. Y. Central, United Aircraft, U. S. Rubber, Anaconda, Kennecott, General Electric and Standard Oil of N. J.

Carrier loans were in front of a generally higher bond department. Most commodities held to a steady course.

The principal prop for speculative sentiment, brokers said, was the little better labor outlook.

The survey of the magazine "Steel" came in for study by market analysts. The review said "establishment of new records in several departments of the steel industry still is being accomplished, particularly as regards production, sales volume and shipments."

"Substituting ever becomes more prevalent," the publication added.

Holders of rails were encouraged by the forecast of the 13 shippers' advisory boards that the country's freight loadings in the second quarter would exceed the like 1940 period by about 15 per cent.

The Same Thing Could Happen To Any of Us

INDEPENDENCE, Kas.—(AP)—District Judge J. W. Holdren was breezing along on the road from Coffeyville and passed a man walking and carrying a gasoline can.

"Rather silly for a man to run out of gas when he has a gauge right in front of him, eh?" said the judge to his passenger.

A mile farther on the judge's car fizzled and died. Out of gas. He started walking to a filling station but a fellow in another car drove up and offered to push the judge's stalled one.

At the station the judge thanked the friendly driver and told him about the remark he had made when he had seen the fellow walking with the gas can. "Yeh," said the friendly fellow. "I was the man who looked so silly to you."

MISSPENT LONG FUNDS HUNTED

Louisiana Crime Commission Uncovers $3,200,000 In Reform Program.

BATON ROUGE, La. — (UP) — Louisiana has recovered approximately $3,200,000 of its misspent funds since the reform administration of Gov. Sam Houston Jones came into power, according to Jerome A. Hayes, supervisor of public funds.

Hayes estimated that less than one-tenth of the corruption which existed throughout the state during the regime of the ousted Huey P. Long machine had been uncovered.

The recoveries were made through investigations by Hayes and a crime commission set up by Jones to ferret out evidence of corruption. Hayes said nearly $2,500,000 in "irregular, and-or improper transactions" had been restored to the treasury by his investigations and that the remaining $700,000 was recovered by the crime commission at a cost of little more than $30,000 to the state.

If the New Orleans area is any criterion," Hayes said, "the average Louisianan has only a slight conception of the extent of irregularities that have reached all over Louisiana.

"Every hour brings something more curious. I am getting a liberal education."

The supervisor disclosed that some of the state's small parishes (counties), over a period of years, had lost more than their annual budget because of high officials in the parish. He said another prolific field for investigation was found in past actions of the highway commission in giving special benefits to business firms.

ENGINEER'S SON ENDS OWN LIFE

Body of Harold Shenberger, 35, Found In Ashland County Garage.

(By Staff Correspondent)

ASHLAND—A coroner's verdict of suicide was returned yesterday in the death of Harold W. Shenberger, 35, Ashland county highway employe and son of County Engineer L. G. Shenberger, whose body was found by a fellow worker in the county garage.

Shenberger died from carbon monoxide gas from the exhause of a truck running in the garage, Coroner George Emery said.

Authorities said Shenberger apparently had gone to the garage alone Sunday morning. His body was found before noon by another county road worker. Shenberger was a truck driver.

Native of Hayesville, Shenberger had lived in Ashland county all his life. He was a member of the Hayesville Methodist church and Modern Woodmen lodge.

The body was taken to the Gilbert funeral home where friends may call until noon Tuesday. Private funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday. Burial will be in the Hayesville cemetery.

Surviving are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Shenberger; one son, Wendell; a brother, Robert of Ashland; and two sisters, Mrs. Frances Hutchison of Hayesville, and Miss Bernice Shenberger, of Ashland.

Finnish Match Boxes Now Carry Butter and Sugar

HELSINKI—(AP)—An American in a Finnish restaurant might think that snuff-boxes had made a comeback, seeing how every other person pulls a container out of pocket or handbag.

Actually, what he sees are pill-boxes, vials, match-boxes, test-tubes, candy boxes, typewriter ribbon cases, all kinds of odds and ends used for carrying around a bit of sugar and butter.

These precious food items are strictly rationed, and Finns like to have some handy wherever they go. In restaurants, a sprinkling of sugar in this and a lump of butter in that dish makes the food tastier. On visits it is good manners not to horn in on your hosts' limited supply.

Manufacturers have seized on the opportunity. As soon as rationing came into force, various receptacles, of many shapes, sizes, colors, and designs began to appear on the market—advertised as specially prepared for pocket stores of sugar and butter.

stances, and any employer association which supports and assists it in such a position, are endangering the national security.

"Such conduct not only threatens the vital continuity of production, but it challenges the nation's domestic authority, weakens respect of labor for the national aims, and destroys the sense of unity and common effort."

The report, signed by Senator La Follette (Prog-Wis.) as chairman and Senator Thomas (D-Utah) recommends speedier "adjudication and settlement" of court and labor board cases involving collective bargaining issues to avoid resort to "novel substantiative measures."

"The benefits to be gained by collective bargaining in this period of defense activity," it said, "may evaporate before the present procedures of the labor board and the courts have reached a final adjudication of the rights involved. * * *"

"Wholehearted and prompt compliance with the mandate of the national labor relations act once it is interpreted and applied should be sufficient to avert interruptions of production in such cases."

The committee limited its study to strikes in the plants of the three companies at Monroe, Mich.; Youngstown, Warren, Canton, and Massillon, Ohio, and Johnstown, Pa.

It mentioned a fourth company —Inland Steel—only incidentally by quoting from a report of a federal mediation board.

'Petain Streets' Abound in France Since Occupation

VICHY—(AP)—The epidemic of renaming French streets has lost its first prominent would-be victim. At the Marshal's own request, Lyons scuttled a proposal to change the historic name of its Bellecour Square to Marshal Petain Square.

There are few spots left in unoccupied France and North Africa that have not rechristened a street or square for the Chief of State.

Heaviest casualties have been suffered by those bearing the name of the late Republic or of Jean Jaures, venerated Socialist leader, both of which were considered indispensable in municipal nomenclature.

TROOPS MASSED ALONG BORDERS OF YUGOSLAVIA

Nation Moves For Closer Ties With Turkey as Germans Flee to Homeland.

ish as well as Yugoslavian liberty.

On these grounds, it was understood, Gavrilovic will ask for Turkish military collaboration in the event "clarification" of German-Yugoslavian relations proves impossible and war results.

The government of Premier Gen. Dusan Simovic completed preparations for possible war and at the same time struggled to heal a growing rift between Serbian and Croat leaders.

More than 1,000 German nationals left Belgrade aboard a Danube river steamer after the Yugoslav government reportedly notified Germany that Belgrade will be defended by Yugoslav forces in the event of a Nazi attack.

German and Italian legation staffs packed or destroyed official papers in preparation for speedy flight. Members of the British legation staff did likewise.

All Yugoslavia's available reserves were called to the colors to bring the army's total to 1,500,000 men. Simovic's regime was understood to have informed Germany it reserves "full liberty of action"—an intimation that Yugoslav troops might crash into Albania if the German Balkan army in Rumania and Bulgaria invades Yugoslavia.

Guards along the Yugoslav-Albanian frontier were reinforced.

Yugoslavia, already supported by assurances of material aid from the United States, Britain and possibly Turkey, was said to have received a promise from Moscow that Russia would "back up Yugoslavia to the limit" in war against Germany.

Imminence of a Balkan conflict was reflected in a reliable report that understandings already have been reached among Germany, Italy and Yugoslavia for exchange of their respective diplomatic representatives in the event of war.

Reich Issues Warning On 'Further Insults'

BERLIN —(INS)— The German government solemnly warned Yugoslavia today against "further insults and hostile acts which might endanger the prestige of the Reich."

The new warning was issued by a spokesman for the Wilhelmstrasse while Berlin still resounded to authoritative threats of a sudden "blitz" attack on Yugoslavia unless the Belgrade government reaffirms its adhesion to the Axis-Japanese alliance.

As animostiy between Berlin and Belgrade hit a new peak, the German capital received reports of riotous new anti-German outbreaks in Serbia, allegedly encouraged by the Yugoslav government.

While nothing was stated officially regarding a German-Yugoslav diplomatic break, the whole atmosphere at the Wilhelmstrasse pointed to a rapid deterioration of Berlin-Belgrade relations until "rock bottom" is reached.

Unless Yugoslavia acts swiftly and drastically to halt it, informed quarters indicated, the threatened "blitz" is imminent.

RAF Blasts Nazi Channel Shipping

LONDON —(AP)— RAF bombers and fighters blasted the French "invasion coast" and German channel shipping by daylight today in a fiery follow-up to a night raid on the Nazi battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau at Brest.

The air over the Dover straight was declared "humming" throughout the morning and early afternoon with British planes, and the heavy crump of falling bombs could be heard plainly on this side of the channel.

Observers watching through glasses also saw water shooting into the air near te German-occupied shore. This was believed to be a continuation of attacks on German shipping which earlier in the day was reported by the air ministry to have left two German tankers afire and sinking off Le Havre.

In last night's attack on Brest the air ministry said that no direct hits were observed on the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, but that their docks were "straddled from all directions by medium, large and very large bombs."

All Germans Ordered To Leave Yugoslavia

BERLIN — (US) — Authorized Nazi sources said today that the government had ordered all German citizens to leave Yugoslavia immediately.

The statement was made soon after German informants had asserted, and Bulgarian sources had denied, that Bulgaria had ordered general mobilization.

It came also, as authorized German sources said that the government had at last received a statement of the foreign policy of the new Yugoslav government which Germany had sought insistently for four days.

"However," an authorized informant added, "we know nothing about it containing anything regarding Yugoslavia's attitude to the German-Japanese-Italian alliance."

(This might prove to mean that Yugoslavia had refused to commit itself but had merely expressed a desire to maintain its neutrality and remain at peace with its neighbors. Such a statement would be an implicit repudiation of any secret agreement by the previous Yugoslav government to permit Germany to transport war materials through Yugoslavia for an attack on Greece.)

Nazi informants said that the order to Germans to leave Yugoslavia at once was the result of anti-German demonstrations and the beating of German citizens.

German Minister Leaves for Berlin

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia—(AP)—The secretary of the German legation announced this afternoon that the German minister to Yugoslavia, Viktor Von Heeren, was leaving for Berlin.

The same source said "the situation which was serious but not hopeless yesterday, at noon today is desperate and practically hopeless."

"A decisive turn for the better is not impossible," he added, "but it would be an unexpected miracle."

RESCUE 1,000 IN SEA BATTLE

British Pick Up Italians After Inflicting Heavy Defeat on Navy; Planes Used.

that no damage was done to any British ship.

It was recalled here, as Britons expressed astonishment at the completeness of their navy's victory, that the Italians and Germans had joined Saturday in claiming terrible British fleet losses in attacks by German and Italian planes.

The communique, in customary terse admiralty style, revealed a chronology of the battle.

Admiralty reconnaissance planes had sighted Italian warships, always elusive, off the southeast coast of Sicily, at the entrance to the Ionian sea where Greek and Roman galleys used to fight, last Thursday morning.

Light fleet units sighted a 35,000-ton Italian battleship southwest of Crete, to the east, Friday morning.

Reconnaissance planes flashed word that two battleships, cruisers and destroyers had been sighted to the north of this position.

The Italians turned and fled westward.

The British fleet raced in pursuit, and ships of the little Greek navy, advised of the prospect of a fight, at once proceeded at full steam to battle positions.

Throughout the day navy torpedo planes attacked the battleship as it fled, hitting it again and again, the admiralty asserted, and lowering its speed.

Royal Air Force bombing planes arrived and joined in a general plane-ship attack on Italian cruisers and destroyers.

The loss of speed to the Italian ships was such that at dusk Friday heavy British fleet units arrived within range.

Then, in a battle the details of which are still to come, the British fleet smashed shells into the fleeing Italian ships, caught after months of search.

Aside from the debacle to the Italian fleet, the battle was regarded by naval experts as historic because for the first time airplanes had played a big if not decisive part in a naval battle, in that they had slowed the Italian ships sufficiently to permit the fleet to close with them.

Thus, according to the experts, Britain's growing air power had upset Italy's fundamental naval strategy based on fast ships which, theoretically, would be able to strike quickly and escape from a slower enemy.

It was the first time a battleship had been torpedoed by a plane effectively in a running battle at sea.

British Warships Unharmed in Fight

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt — (AP) — The British warships which won "the battle of the Ionian sea" returned to port today without an outward sign of damage.

WAIT REACTION ON SEIZURE OF AXIS SHIPPING

U. S. Officials Expect Violent Move as Plan Appears Likely to Extend to Hemisphere.

tries have indicated a disposition to take similar action but were believed to have waited on a decision by the United States.

Germany has about 40 ships in Latin American ports, and Italy considerably fewer.

The government here was believed to have acted primarily because of the reported discovery of sabotage but the decision may also have been influenced by the indications of a concerted German-Italian attempt to get as many ships as possible out of hemisphere ports.

Some Axis ships put out to sea from South American ports during the week-end to try to break through the British blockade, and others apparently were getting ready to depart.

The freighter Villaperosa, anchored many months at Wilmington, N. C., was the ship that touched off the surprising train of events, it was learned. On Saturday, naval officials decided that it was more desirable to have her moored some distance up the river from her anchorage. When they boarded her, they found her machinery completely dismantled.

Upon this discovery, the navy intelligence found other evidence which strengthened the suspicion that widespread, systematic sabotage was in progress, it was said.

The information was laid at once before President Roosevelt, and it was with his approval that the coast guard got its orders.

The government acted upon a World war anti-sabotage statute which authorizes the coast guard to assume custody of foreign ships and remove their crews when a captain permits wilful damage to the vessel. This law also provides that any ship that actually has been sabotaged may be declared forfeited to the United States.

Italian Says That Seizure Was Planned

NEW YORK—(AP)—Italo E. Verrando, general manager of the Italian line in the United States, declared today that the seizure of Italian ships in this country was in accordance with a prearranged plan which had been "in the offing for some time."

"All ships were supposed to be seized by the United States government for use as planned," he said. "Everybody knew that."

Verrando did not elaborate on the statement.

Italy Withholds Comment On Ships

ROME— (AP) —Authorities withheld comment today on the United States' seizure of Axis merchantmen, but observers expected the eventual reaction would be strong.

Hints of possible reprisals if Italian and German ships were confiscated were published when such a suggestion was made in London three months ago.

Britain 'Gratified' Over U. S. Action

LONDON— (AP) —An authoritative source said today Britain was "gratified" over the United States action in placing Italian, German and Danish ships in protective custody.

This source said such steps were highly desirable because of the present shortage of merchant shipping, and prospects of a greater shortage by the end of the war.

* * *

MANILA — (AP) — Four Danish ships in Philippine waters were taken under protective custody today by the United States navy.

French Ship Makes Abrupt Harbor Dash

NEW YORK—(INS)—The French freighter Ile De Quessant, tied up at a Hudson river pier since beginning of the European war, made an unheralded and unexplained dash of several miles down the river and across New York harbor to Staten Island today.

The Ile De Quessant scooted down the Hudson soon after revelation that New York police have compiled a list of all French ships in New York harbor.

There was no indication whether this action was in connection with federal seizures of Axis and Danish ships.

City authorities refused to reveal whether the list was drawn up at the instigation of Washington officials. There are seven French vessels in New York harbor, including the giant luxury liner, the Normandie.

COLUMBUS AIRPLANE FACTORY DEMONSTRATES DEFENSE PLANS

COLUMBUS—(AP)—A "real life" lesson in American defense planning and production is unfolding here day-by-day as work on the Curtiss Wright corporation's new airplane factory moves forward at an almost unbelievable pace.

Undreamed of here a year ago, the $10,000,000 factory is one-fourth completed and by July 1 will start aircraft production. Construction began two months ago.

The first ships will roll off assembly lines of the two-acre plant late in October or early November, Williams said.

Already the firm, in its temporary quarters on the Ohio State fairgrounds, is turning out parts for pursuit ships being assembled in Curtiss Wright's Buffalo, N. Y., factory.

The plant here will manufacture three types of ships: the SO 3C-1, an observation plane for naval use; the SB2C-1, a scouting bomber for the navy, and a similar bomber for army use.

The scouting bomber will be a single-motor job, weighing 12,000 pounds and capable of doing 350 miles per hour.

PRAISES LIQUOR MONOPOLY PLAN

Ohio Director Says Assets Are Greater Than Liabilities.

MOBILE, Ala. —(U.P.)— Director Jacob B. Taylor of the Ohio department of liquor control, praised the monopoly system of liquor control at the mid-year meeting of the National Alcoholic Beverage Control association here today.

Taylor said the assets of monopoly exceeded its liabilities. He listed "a good, clean store operation; protection of quality; maximum earning capacity; low prices; no sales stimulation; no price wars; stability, and no credit risks" as assets.

Call Mass Meeting At Chalmers Plant

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—(INS)—CIO strikers were called to a mass meeting near the big Allis-Chalmers plant today as the factory went into its fourth day of curtailed production on $45,000,000 worth of national defense orders for the army and navy.

The plant resumed operations last Friday at the request of OPM Director William S. Knudsen and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, having been closed since Jan. 21 by a strike called by the CIO United Automobile Workers.

After voting at a meeting Saturday to continue the strike, the UAW members met again yesterday to discuss a plan of action and heard speakers assail Knudsen and Secretary Knox for "forcing" reopening of the plant.

Deadline Approaches On Work Stoppage

NEW YORK —(AP)— Zero hour for a possible work stoppage in most of the nation's soft coal mines approached today after 13 days of fruitless negotiations for a new contract to replace the current agreement expiring at midnight.

"I am faintly clinging to hope," said John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America (CIO), who has instructed 330,000 miners in the Appalachian field not to work without a contract or without assurance any forthcoming benefits would be retroactive to April 1.

"Only a miracle can prevent the work stoppage," said unofficial spokesmen for both sides, declaring negotiations were as hopelessly tangled over the question of wages—the $1-a-day increase to $7 demanded by the union—as when they began.

'Robot Miners' Increase Coal Output In Ruhr

ESSEN, Germany — (INS) — Mechanization is making rapid progress in mining.

"Robot miners" after months of severe tests have been put into practical work in six coal mines of the Ruhr district, boosting production per head and shift by no less than 40 per cent.

The "robot miner," a combination of three machines, drills holes, breaks coal loose and carries it away to transport carriers all in one, thereby considerably reducing the work which heretofore had to be done by the miner.

The machine eats its way into the coal layers so rapidly that miners have difficulty in following up with fitting the wooden support required in order to prevent the new shafts from collapsing.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, MARCH 31, 1941.

Indiana is debating the "problem" of how to tell when a football fan is drunk—thus complicating the obvious.

It appears that "the American way of life" depends on whether it is the day before or the day after a strike is settled.

A bill introduced in the New York assembly seeks to set up a "youth correction authority"—probably to succeed the quite efficacious but obsolete wood shed.

One Weak Link In Defense Chain

PARENTS of drafted boys—as well as the boys themselves—have been wondering about the appearance of discrimination in the matter of selective service procedure, as compared with governmental attitude toward defense strikers.

If the need is as urgent as represented, with young men being taken from jobs and inducted into compulsory military training to meet one part of the national defense program, why should other men engaged in industrial production of vital defense materials be permitted to stop work, and to prevent other men from working?

These young draftees are paid from $21 to $30 a month—a mere fraction of the wages received by the lowest paid workers in defense industries.

A majority of the men sent away to training camps may not like this interruption of their plans but they are accepting it as a duty of citizenship. Taxpayers are also assuming a heavy added burden of defense costs without complaint.

But in the ranks of organized labor—highest paid in the world—there has been rebellion, violence and internal strife which has seriously handicapped production of war materials for national defense and aid to Britain.

A particularly dangerous situation arose in connection with the Allis-Chalmers strike in Milwaukee, where it has been revealed that 40 per cent of the strike vote taken early this year was fraudulent.

The Milwaukee Journal calls this a betrayal of labor itself, and asks: "What results have followed from this corrupt act? Sixty-three days have been lost for 7,800 men—a total loss in pay roll of 2½ million dollars. This loss has been taken out of the homes and out of the living of women and children. Twenty-five destroyers of the United States navy—now, when the cry is for ships and more ships—have been held up in the building. One of the nation's most important powder plants at Radford, Va., is still without machinery."

A recent poll has shown that 85 per cent of the American people favor a "waiting period," such as has been proposed by Defense Chief William S. Knudsen, before a strike in a defense industry can become effective.

The fact that some strikes are being settled offers at least temporary encouragement that the new mediation board and federal conciliators may do more effective work within the coming days and weeks, but other strikes are threatening and continuance of an intolerable situation seems not unlikely—unless a changed attitude is taken by responsible leaders in the strike movement in defense industries.

Wings Over the World

ONE of the surest things in this rather unpredictable world is that Americans are going to do a lot of flying from now on. The war has immensely stepped up airplane production in all the countries able to make them. With our vast manufacturing power, plus the present need for ourselves and other nations, we should surpass the production of all other nations together, when we "go all out" as we are preparing to do. The present national program calls for 37,000 planes. If they don't win the war soon enough, the program may call for hundreds of thousands.

This is the time foreseen by the poet Tennyson nearly a century ago, when he "Saw the heavens filled with shouting, and there rained a ghastly dew from the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue." That red dew is falling now, and there will be much more of it. But when "the war-drum throbs no longer, and the battle-flags are furled in the parliament of man, the federation of the world," then will come the real age of flying.

Words as 'Tools of Thought'

LEST there be some notion that Latin is too "dead" a language to merit more than passing attention by any except ministers, doctors, lawyers and college professors, it may be worthy of note that today, through Friday, is being sponsored by the University of Michigan as Latin week.

As director of this event, George E. Carrothers urges the importance of a more extensive vocabulary than is ordinarily acquired by students confined to modern languages. He says:

"It is well known that our thinking processes can never pass far beyond our vocabularies, either in range or in precision. The study of Latin words and sentences demands close scrutiny to determine their meaning. Thus a student's proficiency in the understanding and use of his own language keeps pace with his advancement in Latin and provides him with the ability to think analytically and with precision."

While many things may seem to have more practical value, and to be more important just now, than a knowledge of Latin or Greek, it may be well to keep in mind that these languages hold treasures, and pleasures, which are denied to persons unfamiliar with them, and that responsibility rests upon at least a small percentage of present-day young people to perfect their "tools of thought."

Granary as Well as Arsenal

THERE has been a big food surplus accumulating for years in this country. It now seems like a providential store, guaranteeing our own people against hunger and enabling us to supply friendly foreign nations that have sterner work to do than planting crops.

So great is the value of possessing such food stores, for such purposes, that it would be a serious mistake to let them be depleted. There is no way to know now what the future food requirements of the outer world will be but it is safe to assume they will be great, because vast numbers of food-growers are now in military service.

Even if the war were to end this year, there would be big food shortages abroad. It is almost sure to last longer—nobody knows how long. Uncle Sam, at least, should raise enough to keep in the granary more food that he needs for himself.

Oklahoma has voted to "live within its income"—which is a fine idea, if the income can be sufficiently stretched.

Whatever Americans do not "understand" about the Japanese could probably be explained by the Chinese.

THERE AIN'T GONNA BE NO CORE

Advantage In Listing Unemployed

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

UNCLE SAM'S Office of Production Management recently launched its campaign to get all available defense workers listed with the United States Employment Service more with a view to maximum plant activity than for the actual craftsmen's benefit.

At any rate, it was output that Production Chief William S. Knudsen unquestionably had in mind. Maybe Co-Chief Sidney Hillman, who particularly represents labor in the OPM set-up, was thinking considerably of the registration system's obvious advantages from the standpoint of the workingman also. It promises to be an excellent thing for 'em in the long run, anyhow.

The scheme's to get all unemployed workers on the list; likewise to get onto it all workers employed in non-defensive industries who have, incidentally, the necessary skills, of various sorts, to make 'em useful, by changing jobs, in defensive ones.

Of course, each registrant's place of residence, as well as his name, will be recorded. Thus, if a defense manufacturer at Podunk, for instance, needs men and applies to the U. S. Employment Service for 'em, the service will assign them to him from his own immediate neighborhood. He won't have to scout about the country for 'em and they won't have to travel perhaps long distances to report to him for duty.

This will count materially. It's worse than a bother for a newly-hired employe to have to transport himself and his family from one place to another and re-settle in a strange neighborhood. It's a near-impossibility frequently, at present.

Where to Live.

Right where he's been living for quite awhile, a workingman usually has a home—rented, quite likely, but he's in it and can stay there. But he may not be able to find one at some defense center that he's just trying to move into; such centers are frightfully overcrowded under existing circumstances.

To be sure, the government's building houses as fast as it can, for war workers, but it hasn't got 'em yet. That's why OPM is so anxious to avoid enforced migrations of defense-making availables. There's no room for 'em where they're needed.

Eligibles don't register directly with the U. S. Employment Service. They register with the state employment exchanges, but the latter are affiliated with the U. S. service and turn their lists in to it.

OPM's clamor for registrations, then, at today's juncture, is to facilitate defensive production, and the howl for workers is due to gain volume as the program progresses. As yet the famine for craftsmen is only local, as at places like Norfolk, but it's a safe bet that it'll become national and a deal more acute not more than comparatively a few weeks hence.

After the War—

Ultimately, though, the war and defense activity will peter out, the jobs they're providing will peter out by the millions also and Uncle Sam will have unemployment on his hands again, wholesale.

But this next time he'll have a complete list of all workers in front of him, by name and address. It won't be like the last time, when there was an unlimited amount of uncertainty about it.

Gain In War On Influenza.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

EPIDEMICS, plagues, the fourth horseman of the Apocalypse, are ever present shadows on the fringes of the fighting armies. Medical men think about them constantly, say very little about them because they do not want to create an air of fear. But we have heard reports within the last week of the increase in typhus fever in the European armies.

Typhus fever, which is not the same as typhoid fever is always present somewhere in the world. Large or small reservoirs of it were uncovered in the Balkans and in Russia by the late Dr. Hans Zinsser. It is particularly likely to be spread at times when there is a large concentration of people or movements of people, and where hygenic conditions are such that filth prevails and personal cleanliness cannot be carefully observed. It can, however, be very easily controlled because it is spread by lice.

In the case of influenza, we are in a somewhat different and less advantageous position. Influenza, like typhoid, is likely to break out in epidemic form after sleeping for a long time and concentrations of people and movements of people also conduce to its appearance. But we do not know the cause of influenza. It is probably spread from person to person. One of the horrible memories of my life is the epidemic of influenza that we had among soldiers in the last World war. Since that time a great deal of research has been expended on influenza with not very definite results.

Research on Influenza.

It has been found that about the only animal which can catch influenza is the ferret and research workers at the Rockefeller Institute think that the disease they give the ferret is exactly identical with human influenza. The ferret experiments, however, struck a kind of a snag. It was thought that the serum of the ferrets could be used to make a vaccine for prevention and cure. But the vaccine did not work out very well.

Then an accident occurred in the laboratory. Four ferrets which had been inoculated with influenza also got distemper. It was found that ferrets who had distemper could not be inoculated with the flu virus. At first the research workers blamed this on a slip-up in technic, but one of them carefully reviewed the evidence, gave the ferrets massive doses of flu, and found that they remained healthy—even frisky.

Here was a lead. The distemper virus is very closely associated with the influenza virus and it is quite possible that the serum of animals who have had distemper is protective against human influenza.

I cannot say yet whether these experiments will lead to a definitely valuable serum against influenza, but the possibility is there, and even more than that, the probability. So we feel better prepared for the next influenza epidemic than we ever have in the past.

Timely Ed'torial

Volunteer Defense Dollars.

Fifteen million citizens who filed federal income tax returns this year submitted, in most cases graciously, to this assessment for carrying on and defending our government.

In addition, it is reported officially, "numerous persons" who owed no tax, contributed amounts of $1 or more, aggregating several hundred thousand dollars, which will be earmarked "for defense only."

The tax payments were in drafted, or conscripted, money. The donations were volunteer dollars from meager incomes of men and women who thus gave convincing evidence of a sturdy faith in democracy and of a practical patriotism which they cannot express fully by singing the National Anthem or "God Bless America."—Toledo Blade.

Nazi Propaganda Flourishes Here, Hints at 'Own Government' In U. S.

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—With Martin Dies chalking up new records as a statement-maker, an energetic Nazi propaganda machine has been flourishing right under his nose. It is the German American National Alliance of Einheitsfront, which many Nazis treat as successor of the Bund.

One interesting phase of the Einheitsfront is the vigorous co-operation it gives the America First Committee. One of its pamphlets urged that contributions from $1 upward be sent to the America First Committee, Board of Trade Building, Chicago, as a part of the effort to defeat the Lease-Lend Bill.

Another of these pamphlets, carrying the same appeal for the America First Committee, published also an appeal against aid to Britain, written in the same brand of lavish language which usually emanates from Berlin.

"Those who shout loudest for war," it said, ". . . are usually old men sterile biologically, and even sterile of all dreams and memories of life. Their senile bodies, their cold, calculating brain, frequently find compensation for their lost youth in hatred and false ambitions for glory or gold; and their conscience is hardened like their arteries and their hearts."

The Einheitsfront also has been active in drumming up audiences for America First speakers, such as Colonel Lindberg. When Lindbergh was scheduled to speak in Chicago last August, Henry Jonhk, financial secretary of the Einheitsfront read over the air a "pressing summons to all members and listeners to the United Front radio hour to do their duty by attending the great mass meeting at Soldiers Field. None dare or should fail!" he added ominously.

One interesting idea hinted at by the Einheitsfront is that used in the Sudetenland to dismember Czechoslovakia—the right of German minorities to establish their own government. For instance, one issue of the Sonngtagpost of Chicago, affiliated with the organization, contained this thought:

"If our racial brothers in the Balkans were in a position, in spite of need and attempted oppression and chicane, to assure their position, why should we not be able to do it if only the will is there?"

Under the Dome.

JIM FARLEY had all the newspapers saved during his absence in South America, carefully read the editorials, Washington columns and sports pages after he returned. . . . All you need to do to get Nevada's Senator McCarran's vote against a measure is to say the administration is for it. . . . "That Night In Rio," now wowing them in New York, is the only movie ever to contain a Pan-American Good Neighbor message and to get the official praise of Nelson Rockefeller. Remarked a member of the Brazilian embassy of the heroine: "She is not a good neighbor, she is a very naughty one." . . . Ex-Budget Director Lewis Douglas, now head of the Mutual Life Insurance company, has won SEC praise by presenting a frank and complete annual report of his firm's finances.

Feeding France.

BEHIND the two shiploads of wheat for France—which have now backfired—is the story of some vigorous wrangling inside the state department, also inside the administration over the general policy of feeding occupied countries.

Inside the state department still survives an appeasement clique. Feebler than during the Cliveden days, it still veers toward the teachings of ex-Undersecretary William R. Castle and ex-Ambassador to Germany Hugh R. Wilson.

It was this group which urged Secretary Hull to OK the proposed $100,000,000 wheat loan to Spain last December. And it has been this group which favored feeding France.

Chief opponent of this group inside the state department has been Undersecretary Sumner Welles, close friend of the president, a gentleman of firm convictions.

Outside the state department, an equally close friend of Roosevelt's, William Christian Bullitt, ex-Ambassador to Paris, also favored food for his old friends in France. By no means an appeaser, Bullitt's position was swayed partly by sentiment, partly by the belief that a few shiploads of food could save the French people from hating Britain.

Faced with divergent views, Roosevelt turned to Admiral William Leahy, now ambassador to Vichy. And ex-sea dog Leahy, intimate friend of French sea-dog Darlan, real power behind Marshal Petain, finally recommended food for Vichy. In fact Admiral Leahy had ordered shipment of food to take with him, and although it got left behind on the dock, subsequent shipments of about 300 tons of canned goods have been sent to Leahy monthly as a gift to Marshal Petain and the cabinet.

Sea-Dog Diplomacy.

SO WHEN Admiral Darlan threatened to disrupt the British blockade with the French navy, Admiral Leahy recommended that two cargoes of wheat might quiet the French navy.

What Admiral Darlan did not tell his sea-dog friend Admiral Leahy, however, was that the Vichy government had enough food to send 190,000 head of cattle, 600,000 head of small livestock, 600,000 calves and hogs, 60,000 tons of fresh vegetables, 8,000 tons of cheese and 36,000 tons of table oil to Germany. In fact it has now leaked out that this deal was being arranged at the very moment Admiral Darlan was threatening to use warships to break the blockade.

So it looks as if the appeasement clique, and its Hoover supporters, might have trouble in the future.

Note—Another interesting factor which counted in swinging Roosevelt over to the feed-France idea was American newspaper opinion. According to the press survey of James S. Tuohey Associates, 76% of the editorials supported the British blockade against France before Admiral Darlan's threat. But after his threat, editorial support for the British blockade against France dropped to only 22%.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Not since the days when manufacturers first performed the miracle of rolling automobiles off a continuous production line has there been so much talk of mass production as has been raised by national defense.

It was big, unexcitable "Bill" Knudsen, chief of production management, very much in the pink in spite of the strenuous duties of these days, who told me the other day that in his opinion the layman misunderstood about "mass production."

"My favorite definition of it," he said, "is that it is not a matter of quantity or mass at all, but of quality—of raising the production of each item to the greatest degree of perfection.

"I remember years ago when Leland was president of Cadillac. He took three of his cars to England. He called in a group of British engineers. He tore those three cars down, put all the parts together and mixed them up. The engineers thought he was crazy; told him he never would get those cars back together again. But he did. He reassembled those parts into three cars just as good as the ones he had torn down. That's mass production."

Americans Don't Wonder.

WHAT caused the British engineers to go boogle-eyed has become such a commonplace that the average American doesn't even bother to think of it any more. But a story has dribbled slowly out of the army and defense agencies here which, if it causes no amazement in the mind of John Q. Public, who has come to think that American industry has no limitations, will probably cause as much wonder abroad as Mr. Leland's demonstration.

It is this: The army air corps, with the cooperation of the Office of Production Management, is up to the ear-phones in its helmets in plans for mass production of two- and four-motored bombers—those huge 11- to 23-ton ships, which, heavily armed and armored, can range 2,000 to 3,000 miles with their death-dealing loads of bombs, without refueling.

Maj. Gen. G. H. Bret, of the air corps, testifying before a house sub-committee, said the first bombers in the 3,600-ship initial program are expected to roll from the assembly lines in 1942 and the program is expected to be complete in 1943. If I remember my arithmetic at all, that means that within two years America will be turning out ten of these giant bombers a day, 300 a month. And these in addition to the same type bombers being manufactured by private firms, of which there are at least three now operating at full speed and rapidly expanding.

Four Assembly Plants.

HERE is the way the program will work, according to Knudsen: Contracts already have been signed with the automobile industry for manufacture of parts, and sub-contracts signed with smaller manufacturers on more than 400 items that go into the big bombers. Plans are complete and some work started on the four huge assembly plants, at Omaha, Kansas City, Kans., Tulsa, Okla., and Fort Worth, Tex.

When these plants are finished and the big and little manufacturers have completed retooling and expansion, parts for the bombers, tooled to that necessary millionth of an inch, will come to those four cities from all over the United States to be assembled, tested and delivered.

Less than a year ago, manufacturers, government officials and army men were explaining to the public that although it might be possible to use assembly line methods on the small fighter and pursuit planes, it would be utterly impossible to mass-produce the big bombers.

Now, most of the money has been appropriated for bomber plants; contracts let; the plan far along—and Knudsen has told congress: "I really feel that we can secure defense if we have these large bombers. If we had 2,000 of this type now, we could fix things up over there."

A Farmer's Diary

Fire Drill

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE sun had shone all day. Right after supper I took my wife up the hill to see where we intend to soon plant peach trees. She wore an old coat of mine, and there were matches in the pocket. We stood upon the slope among the elders and sumacs and looked off over the top of our own cottage. Idly I scuffed up a bit of dead grass with my toe. Idly, too, she struck a match and dropped it upon the heap.

It seemed to go out; then flared into a quick little friendly flame, that brought the odor of burning grass and dead blackberry canes. It smelled springlike. We both remarked our surprise that the undergrowth should be dry enough to burn.

While we stood and talked, the fire crept outward in an ever-widening circle. The children, attracted by the blaze, came running up the hill — all but the smallest two who had been bidden to remain indoors. These had their noses flattened against the front window watching from below.

The fire circle was ten feet or more in diameter now, but there was no wind. The children danced and capered in the light, and the crackling flames crept westward toward a tangle of thicker grass and canes with my heavy shoes I stamped out the fire at the upper edge of the circle, so that it would not go up hill. I knew the rest would burn itself out.

The western edge flared high, then, casting weird shadows far afield. My wife went down the hill to attend to the little ones, and the rest of us remained, enjoying the fun.

Suddenly, in the village, back of the hill, a mile off, we heard the shrill shriek of the fire siren We vainly scanned the horizon for a glow that would tell where the fire might be. Then, before you could say Jack Robinson, down our own gravel road came a roaring new red fire truck with a long procession of automobiles hurrying after it. It drove into our drive and stopped and the fire chief's head popped out.

"A neighbor of yours knew you had no phone, and thought your house was afire," he said, laughing. "Do you want that fire on the hill put out?"

I said I thought it would burn itself out, very soon.

"Maybe we ought to do it just for practice," suggested one of the firemen who had come up.

The firemen of our town are its business men. Many of them had jumped up from their supper at sound of the siren. Every one was there. I cannot help but appreciate the fine neighborly cooperation and the speedy service that would be ours in a dire emergency.

RUTH FREE BECOMES BRIDE OF R. F. SCHMITT

Ceremony Performed In the Presence of the Immediate Families At the Congregational Church At Lucas.

IN THE pretty little village church at Lucas Sunday afternoon Miss Ruth Mildred Free exchanged nuptial vows with Robert Frederick Schmitt. The single ring service was read at 1:30 o'clock by the Rev. John A. Peyton, pastor of the Congregational church, in the presence of the immediate families. Greenery and spring flowers in the pastel shades decorated the altar and the church for the ceremony.

Wearing an ensemble of powder blue with pale pink accessories, the bride approached the altar on the arm of her father, J. O. Free. Her bouquet was a Colonial nosegay fashioned with pink roses and gardenias.

Nuptial music, "At Dawning," "Because" and the traditional wedding marches were played by Miss Esther Price.

Mrs. James White, of Lucas, sister of the bride, was her only attendant. She was attired in a beige suit with blue accessories. Her bouquet which was similar to that of the bride's, was of pink roses and blue delphinium.

Mr. White served as best man for Mr. Schmitt.

Immediately following the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Free, at Lucas. Appointments were in white and a large wedding cake topped with a miniature bridal couple, centered the refreshment table.

The couple will defer any trip as the bridegroom is continuing his studies at Ohio State University, and for the present they will reside in Columbus.

Mrs. Schmitt was graduated from Lucas high school and the Mansfield Business Training school. She has been employed at the Lumbermens Mutual insurance company. Mr. Schmitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schmitt, R. D., Mansfield, was graduated from Lucas high school. He is a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Mason-Bucher Vows to be Read At St. Mark's

Open church will be observed for the wedding of Miss Roselyn Mason and Gaylord Bucher when they are united in marriage Saturday, April 26, before the altar of the St. Mark's Lutheran church at 2:30 o'clock. Friends learned of the coming nuptials at a party given Saturday evening at the Johns park pavilion for 25 guests.

Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. William Schaefer, 297 Reed street, mother of the bride-elect, and Miss Martha Piper, cousin of the honoree.

Announcement was made when guests discovered books of matches held by miniature dolls at each place, revealing the time and place of the coming marriage. At the head of the long refreshment table a miniature bridal party graced the board.

Miss Mason told her friends her wedding attendants would be Mrs. Sidney Hofer, matron of honor; Miss Piper, Miss Elizabeth Price and Miss Janet Bucher, bridesmaids, and attending Mr. Bucher will be Rex Bucher, as best man, and Bob Bucher and Ralph Price as ushers.

Games and contests were the diversion of the evening with Mrs. Esther Oyster, Mrs. Nellie Bonecutter and Miss Dorothy McCartney winning the high score gifts. They presented their prizes to the honoree and the hostesses gave her a gift of china.

Later when refreshments were served appointments were in pink, blue, green and yellow.

Out-of-town guests in attendance were Mrs. Sidney Hofer of Orrville, Miss Helen Roush of Ashland and Mrs. George Price of Galion.

Mr. Bucher is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Bucher, 661 McPherson street.

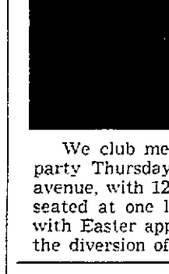
Informally Speaking...

March 31, 1941.

Lucy, dear:

FOR more than two years now, I've been writing you the news of our town, but the tables have been turned, and now you'll have to send me news about the home folk. . . . You see, I'm leaving Wednesday for Mississippi, where, for the next ten months, I'll probably reside in Gulfport—so letters from Ohio undoubtedly will be more welcome than the flowers in May.



Marianne

* * * * *

But in this last letter from The News-Journal tower, I'll write you my final gathering of news about Mansfielders. . . . Betty Austin arrived in town this past week-end to spend spring vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Austin. . . . She's studying voice under the direction of Florence Turner Maley in New York City, you know, and recently sang for the Poets club there. . . . And she also attended a dinner of the New York Singing Teachers association with her instructor.

* * * * *

Six members of the Otterbein college Life Work Recruits Deputation team will provide programs in seven churches in Pennsylvania and New York during spring vacation, and Harold McBride of this city is one of them. . . . This organization is composed of young men and women intending to devote full time to some phase of religious work, and they will appear in Warren, Bradford and Rixford, Pa., as well as Cherry Creek and Jamestown, N. Y.

* * * * *

SPEAKING of college students, among those enrolled for the second semester at the University of Kentucky are four Mansfielders—Robert N. Clingan, John S. Frankeberger, James A. Porter and William E. Otto. . . . According to news from the university, all but seven of the 48 states are represented in the student body, while seven foreign countries and possessions, including Africa, Canada, the Canal Zone, China, Egypt, Mexico and Puerto Rico have sent one or more students there.

* * * * *

Saturday was an important day for Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Robb, as they left for a vacation in Chicago. . . . From there, Mrs. Robb is planning to go to Texas to visit with relatives. . . . She will vacation in San Antonio, Houston and some of the other important cities before returning home in about two months.

* * * * *

BACK from a sojourn in the south are Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sullens, who've just returned from Hot Springs, Ark. . . . They drove out and back in their good-looking new sedan coupe and were gone for several weeks—also visiting with relatives in Oklahoma before starting back north.

* * * * *

AND now if you're planning a vacation, you might take it during the next two weeks, and go to Washington, D. C., for the Cherry Blossom festival. . . . As it is not possible to tell more than a week in advance the definite time when the blossoms will come out, but plans have tentatively been set to stage the festival on April 5 and 6. . . . It is probable that there will be a display of fireworks, military exercises by one of the units stationed in Washington, music by at least one of the U. S. service bands, and a musical performance under the cherry trees by the Columbia Light Opera company. . . . Incidentally, there are some 3,000 cherry trees around the basin.

* * *

Mrs. Jack McKnight and Mrs. Dale Uhlich and their children are leaving for Gulfport, Miss., Wednesday too. . . . They're returning after a two-weeks' vacation here and will join their husbands, Second Lieutenant McKnight and Capt. Uhlich, who have been stationed at Camp Shelby since last October.

* * * * *

SO NOW it's goodbye, Lucy. Do write when you can, and if you ever go travelling down south, don't forget to look me up.

Lovingly,

Marianne

Must True Love Be Tested?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How long does it take to measure true love? Does love at first sight need to be tried and tested, surrounded by all types of prudent safeguards? Or shall we joyously accept the beautiful thing and take its future for granted?

When a lark sings we don't worry and argue—we simply listen in wonder. It's also true that we don't ask a rose to prove that it's a rose. But, you will remind me, love is one thing and marriage another. Marriage would be serious if it merely involved the whole of two lives. It also involves children, parents, friends—a whole human network. Yes, marriage is a condition in which two lovers, however ecstatically happy, however confident of their own hearts, must take time to think twice.

The other day I had a letter from a young pair, whose names are Jerry and Jane. They want to know what reasons there are, if any, for delaying their immediate marriage.

"We have known each other," they confide, "three weeks. We met at a house-party. After our first glance, it seemed as if we both knew. We just seemed to drift toward each other, excluding everyone around us. Inside of an hour we were promised lovers, and the whole problem of life was solved for both of us.

"Up to the time of our meeting neither of us had thought much about real love. So it came like a divine stroke of lightning.

"Fortunately, we don't have to wait because of money reasons. We both have jobs and can manage to live in a small apartment and have a little left. We adore each other so much that we don't think it necessary to spend any more days apart from each other than we have to. But our families say that we should wait till we are sure. What do you think?"

I believe that Jerry and Jane are not mistaken in their love. But I think theirs will be a more successful marriage if they first learn to know each other better, study each other's tastes and temperaments.

As a limit for this deliciously happy period of mutual questioning and discovery, I suggest four months. Nothing will be lost something surely will be gained, and the parents will be pacified.

But though I am certain this advice is wise, and though I earnestly beg Jerry and Jane to follow it, yet if these young lovers do surrender to their hearts' desire and elope next week, I must whisper that they will not thereby forfeit my blessing!

Remedy For Dry Scalp

By MME QUI VEVE

Bosses of beauty shops report that complaints about excessively oily hair are more frequent than yowls about dry tresses. The "oilies" cannot very well regard their stringy locks with indifference, especially as the finger wave wilts quickly and ringlets uncoil in a few days. Hair cares becomes a chore and, if locks are thinnish, the coiffure is a tough problem.

The "drys" have advantage in the fact that the hair appears more abundant than it is, and the permanent wave, properly achieved, is bound to be a success; it will stick around until the shafts grow out and the ends must be trimmed. From the standpoint of hair health, dryness is more likely to interfere with well being of the glory mop than an oily condition.

Hair lives on the blood supply in the scalp. It is kept lustrous by the lubricating fluid that is exuded by the sebaceous glands that are situated where the shafts rest in the flesh. If these glands are active, there can be no dryness. The proper treatment then for crisp tresses is rousing scalp message to incite the little oil gushers to awaken and do the work for which they were designed. Generous applications of oil are essential. Brushing the hair has a vitalizing effect.

Let us outline a treatment that will take no more than fifteen or twenty minutes.

The night before the shampoo begin with a brisk brushing. The brush should be narrow, bristles firm and grouped. A brush with bristles that buckle is worth nothing. Treat the hair strand by strand, holding each tress away from the head, using the brush so that the bristles touch the scalp. Do a rolling motion. Brisk grooming stimulates the network of blood vessels that is close to the surface of the flesh.

Part your glory crown at various places and, with a large medicine dropper, trickle hot mineral oil along the partings. Olive oil will do, but it is not as easily removed as mineral oil. Lubricate the ends of the hair that are extra dry.

Spread out fingers and thumbs, thumbs resting at the nape line; lift and rotate the flesh. In the normal state there is a soft underlying cushion of tissues; as the scalp tightens blood streams are restricted in their activities and the hair is not sufficiently nourished. Use the oil freely. Wrap a towel around the head.

In the morning shampoo with soap that has been melted several days before. For rinsing have the water fairly hot, use a strong current and a bath spray. Three, even four soapings may be necessary.

After the drying friction a little brilliantine into the scalp, so it will not be dry and scaly.

TIPS ON LAUNDERING

Use mild soap water for laundering corduroy articles. Rinse in warm clear water and hang up to dry. When nearly dry, place the article on a flat surface and brush along the ribs with a soft brush. This is better than pressing the corduroy.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"I can't do that, Mary," I told my husband's niece, as dear to me as if she were mine. "I'm so tired that I can't keep my eyes open now. What I'll be after my train journey to New York, I do not even wish to think. But one thing I do know. I would disgrace your supper party. I am sure I should go to sleep right in the middle of it."

"Do you think I'd care?" she retorted. "We'll give you a chair with a high back and tuck a small pillow under your head. Then you can imagine you're in an automobile seat. That's where you're supposed to do your tallest and fanciest sleeping, isn't it?"

"I've been told so," I replied a bit absently, for scurrying through my brain was a query the answer to which eluded me.

Why was Mary relieved at my decision not to attend her supper party?

But intriguing though the speculation was, I had to put it aside summarily, for she was speaking again, this time with emphasis.

"Well! Whatever you decide about the party, one thing is certain, I'll see you beforehand and you'll tell me what's on your mind. Then you can slip away from us whenever you wish. And Noel will meet you at the train."

"Don't be foolish!" I told her with asperity. "I'll take a taxi from—"

"You'll do no such thing," she retorted, "unless you want to break Noel's heart. He'll be inside the ropes with his eyes glued on the train exit, so watch out for him, and don't you dare evade him. And now, darling, I must fly. I'll be seeing you at midnight. Goodbye!"

"Goodbye!" I said hastily as the receiver clicked, but I waited a long second before I turned back to Dicky. I did not want to trouble him with my odd reaction to what his winsome niece had told me.

But, whether it was instinct, intuition, or simple idle curiosity, I could not take Mary's hesitation to my announcement that I was coming to see her, or her insistence that Noel was going to meet me at the station, at their face value. The two other things were related in some way, I was sure, yet I could not determine the answer, and I did not wish Dicky to suspect my confusion. When at last, I turned back to him, however, I flattered myself that I betrayed no trace of what I was thinking.

"Mary okay?" he asked as I came out of the booth.

"Perfectly," I returned. "I am to see her as soon as I get back to the hotel—and I asked her to reserve a room for me there tonight."

"Good girl!" he commented, giving me a comradely pat on the shoulder. "That makes me feel a whole lot better. And now, if you'll yield that seat, I'll get in touch with Dad. You'd better stick close though, for it's a cinch—lead-pipe—that he'll want to talk to you as soon as he gets through with me."

"I know that," I said tenderly, for my father's affection for me is something I dearly cherish. "But ought we not to telephone Lillian first?"

"Not unless you are in a special hurry," he answered. "I think we ought to have all the news there is, before we talk to Lil. Not that I expect much so soon. Dad hasn't had a chance really to swing into action yet. But there's one thing certain. He's going to be tremendously interested in what I shall tell him about Carolyn's activities."

Seeks Help To Break Sassiness

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

"Dear Dr. Myers: We have received much help from your daily articles. I had several years' preparation and experience in kindergarten work and try to apply the methods in raising my own two daughters; one is past four, the other almost two.

"With the older girl, who is nervous, full of energy, very observing, comprehends quickly, co-operative, and very affectionate, we have successfully overcome a series of behavior problems such as tantrums, biting, hitting, the 'NO!' habit, and others. However, at present we want to know how to break her of 'talking back' — I mean plain 'sassiness.' She started last summer after hearing her only playmate do it with her mother. At first we ignored it, thinking she would stop if we didn't notice it. When it didn't stop we tried various punishments but none have been effective. She 'talks back' only to her Daddy and me, and to her Aunt who sometimes stays with her in the evenings (perhaps being her disciplinarians we have unintentionally commanded or nagged her too much.) To everyone else she is very polite.

"We try to make our home one of love and harmony and she has never heard us talk rudely, or raise our voices in anger or argument to one another. We try to divide our affections and attentions, especially between the two children, and they have never shown any signs of jealousy. I enclose a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it."

I can see how hard you have tried to be a good mother and I am sure you are a far better mother than you think you are. Already you have achieved much. Your kindergarten experience should be of great value to you.

Go on with the same poise you pursued in the kindergarten. Be sure never to talk back to this child. In your efforts to reason with her under great emotional strain you may find yourself practically quarrelling with her.

Carefully study the situations in which she is "sassy." As a result, you may be able to reduce the annoyances to her which arouse this. Once you are very clear about the matter and have disciplined yourself to keep calm and never argue with her, announce to her in gentle but decisive tones what the penalty will be for each offense. Perhaps this penalty should be to sit quietly in one place for exactly 20 minutes. Assign this punishment in a good kindergarten fashion, without anger or excitement. Always assign the same punishment immediately for the same sort of offense. Allow no doubts nor exceptions to occur.

Work out a plan with your husband whereby you follow the same procedure. If one of you deals with her misconduct let the other then be silent.

See that the baby lets this older child's things alone and respects her rights and possessions. Don't make older sister give up to younger, but praise her when she does. Be careful not to praise the younger for traits and achievements the older lacks. Never compare them unfavorably. Try to see that the relatives don't. In spite of what you say, jealousy is a big factor. It may be the biggest contribution to her behavior. Do show the older child more affection.

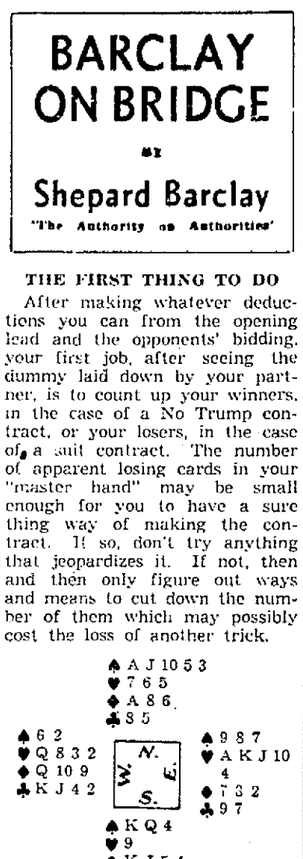
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE FIRST THING TO DO

After making whatever deductions you can from the opening lead and the opponents' bidding, your first job, after seeing the dummy laid down by your partner, is to count up your winners, in the case of a No Trump contract, or your losers, in the case of a suit contract. The number of apparent losing cards in your "master hand" may be small enough for you to have a sure thing way of making the contract. If so, don't try anything that jeopardizes it. If not, then and then only figure out ways and means to cut down the number of them which may possibly cost the loss of another trick.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

3 ♣	3 ♥	3 ♠	4 ♥

After leading his heart K and seeing the dummy's singleton, East switched to his spade 9 to prevent ruffs. The declarer promptly took this with the dummy's K, then led to his diamond A and ruffed one of his two losing hearts with the spade 4. Noting a dearth of entries now to his hand, he decided to accept philosophically the loss of another heart trick, since he still could make his contract if either minor suit finesse would work. So he led the spade Q to his A and promptly tried the club finesse, which lost to the K. West led his heart 3 to East's 10 and the latter returned the club 9. The declarer tried a finesse of the 10, which lost to the J, and he was down one.

How easy this contract was. North, who had lost one heart trick, could have treated both minor finesses as sure to fail and still make his contract by ruffing his two losing hearts. For this he needed two early entries to his hand. The first could have been by winning the second lead, the spade 9, in his own hand. He then could have ruffed one heart. The diamond A would have furnished entry for a ruff of the last heart. With his contract now safe, he could have tried for an overtrick by laying down the diamond K and another diamond, hoping for an even split of the suit. When that developed, he could have won any return, dropped trumps and used the club A as an entry to play the thirteenth diamond for a club discard, thus making an overtrick.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, April 1.

A particularly lively and productive day is forecast from the prevailing lunar and mutual aspects. There may be a greatly accelerated state of affairs especially in the launching of new projects or in the inauguration of fresh ways and means for spurring static affairs into motion, possibly under great pressure and thoroughly practical tactics, in which skill, initiative and energy are brought into full play.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of much activity and progress along really constructive and practical lines. Unusual enterprise and initiative will be brought to bear on new objectives as well as to stimulate stagnant or frustrated efforts. This may be under high pressure and with direct action, elders, superiors and those in power assisting.

A child born on this day should be energetic, practical, skillful and masterful although having a friendly, gracious and generous nature.

RUTH FREE BECOMES BRIDE OF R. F. SCHMITT

Ceremony Performed In the Presence of the Immediate Families At the Congregational Church At Lucas.

IN THE pretty little village church at Lucas Sunday afternoon Miss Ruth Mildred Free exchanged nuptial vows with Robert Frederick Schmitt. The single ring service was read at 1:30 o'clock by the Rev. John A. Peyton, pastor of the Congregational church, in the presence of the immediate families. Greenery and spring flowers in the pastel shades decorated the altar and the church for the ceremony.

Wearing an ensemble of powder blue with pale pink accessories, the bride approached the altar on the arm of her father, J. O. Free. Her bouquet was a Colonial nosegay fashioned with pink roses and gardenias.

Nuptial music, "At Dawning," "Because" and the traditional wedding marches were played by Miss Esther Price.

Mrs. James White, of Lucas, sister of the bride, was her only attendant. She was attired in a beige suit with blue accessories. Her bouquet which was similar to that of the bride's, was of pink roses and blue delphinium.

Mr. White served as best man for Mr. Schmitt.

Immediately following the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Free, at Lucas. Appointments were in white and a large wedding cake topped with a miniature bridal couple, centered the refreshment table.

The couple will defer any trip as the bridegroom is continuing his studies at Ohio State University, and for the present they will reside in Columbus.

Mrs. Schmitt was graduated from Lucas high school and the Mansfield Business Training school. She has been employed at the Lumbermens Mutual insurance company. Mr. Schmitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schmitt, R. D., Mansfield, was graduated from Lucas high school. He is a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Informally Speaking...

March 31, 1941.

Lucy, dear:

FOR more than two years now, I've been writing you the news of our town, but the tables have been turned, and now you'll have to send me news about the home folk. . . . You see, I'm leaving Wednesday for Mississippi, where, for the next ten months, I'll probably reside in Gulfport—so letters from Ohio undoubtedly will be more welcome than the flowers in May.

Marianne

* * * * *

But in this last letter from The News-Journal tower, I'll write you my final gathering of news about Mansfielders. . . . Betty Austin arrived in town this past week-end to spend spring vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Austin. . . . She's studying voice under the direction of Florence Turner Maley in New York City, you know, and recently sang for the Poets club there. . . . And she also attended a dinner of the New York Singing Teachers association with her instructor.

* * * * *

Six members of the Otterbein college Life Work Recruits Deputation team will provide programs in seven churches in Pennsylvania and New York during spring vacation, and Harold McBride of this city is one of them. . . . This organization is composed of young men and women intending to devote full time to some phase of religious work, and they will appear in Warren, Bradford and Rixford, Pa., as well as Cherry Creek and Jamestown, N. Y.

* * * * *

SPEAKING of college students, among those enrolled for the second semester at the University of Kentucky are four Mansfielders—Robert N. Clingan, John S. Frankeberger, James A. Porter and William E. Otto. . . . According to news from the university, all but seven of the 48 states are represented in the student body, while seven foreign countries and possessions, including Africa, Canada, the Canal Zone, China, Egypt, Mexico and Puerto Rico have sent one or more students there.

* * * * *

Saturday was an important day for Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Robb, as they left for a vacation in Chicago. . . . From there, Mrs. Robb is planning to go to Texas to visit with relatives. . . . She will vacation in San Antonio, Houston and some of the other important cities before returning home in about two months.

* * * * *

BACK from a sojourn in the south are Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sullens, who've just returned from Hot Springs, Ark. . . . They drove out and back in their good-looking new sedan coupe and were gone for several weeks—also visiting with relatives in Oklahoma before starting back north.

* * * * *

AND now if you're planning a vacation, you might take it during the next two weeks, and go to Washington, D. C., for the Cherry Blossom festival. . . . As it is not possible to tell more than a week in advance the definite time when the blossoms will come out, but plans have tentatively been set to stage the festival on April 5 and 6. . . . It is probable that there will be a display of fireworks, military exercises by one of the units stationed in Washington, music by at least one of the U. S. service bands, and a musical performance under the cherry trees by the Columbia Light Opera company. . . . Incidentally, there are some 3,000 cherry trees around the basin.

* * *

Mrs. Jack McKnight and Mrs. Dale Uhlich and their children are leaving for Gulfport, Miss., Wednesday too. . . . They're returning after a two-weeks' vacation here and will join their husbands, Second Lieutenant McKnight and Capt. Uhlich, who have been stationed at Camp Shelby since last October.

* * * * *

SO NOW it's goodbye, Lucy. Do write when you can, and if you ever go travelling down south, don't forget to look me up.

Lovingly,

Marianne

A malodorous garbage pail is a sign of poor housekeeping. If washed thoroughly and frequently with hot soapy water, the pail will not smell and will be serviceable for a longer time. If lined with a paper bag or with old newspapers, it will be easier to keep in good condition.
